Roosevelt Postpones Speech to Latin Americans

President Will Address Nation On May 27, His Secretary Says

Will Deliver "Fireside Chat", Early Declares in Announcing Change in Executive's Plans

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt was feeling "fine" tonight, but a speech he was to have delivered Wednesday before the envoys of Latin America's twenty republics was called off and a "fireside chat" on May 27 substituted for it.

"So despite the reports from abroad," said Stephen Early, presidential press secretary, "there will be no world-shaking pronouncement from the president on Wednesday evening, as this office has told you right along."

Mr. Roosevelt was to have spoken at a reception at the Pan-American Union Wednesday night when Latin American diplomats had arranged in his honor. The president had a gastro-intestinal ailment for a week, and, while Early said he was "feeling perfectly fine" once more, the envoys suggested in a resolution that the affair be postponed.

Speech Highly Billed
Although Early had asserted repeatedly that Mr. Roosevelt would be unable to begin drafting the address, it had been billed in some quarters as one which would be of extremely great significance in the fields of foreign policy and hemispheric defense.

There had been such a volume of speculation about Wednesday's speech that one responsible official said Mr. Roosevelt felt that he was being "pushed" somewhat hard to make it a speech of outstanding importance and that the president did not intend to let himself be pushed.

Timing May Be Better
Furthermore, developments in the next fortnight could provide improved "winning" for a significant presidential statement on world concerns. He will have the same immediate audience in the fireside chat on May 27.

Latin American diplomats, their wives and children, Early said, will be asked to spend a "homey" evening at the White House. They will arrive at 9 p. m. EST, hear Mr. Roosevelt speak by radio to the American people and probably the world from 9:30 to 10, and then remain on for refreshments and entertainment.

Darlan Received By Adolf Hitler

BERLIN, May 13 (Tuesday) (AP)—Adolf Hitler has received the French Vice-Premier Admiral Darlan in the presence of German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop. It was officially announced early today.

The communiqué announcing the meeting did not say where or when it took place.

The announcement said: "The fuhrer, in the presence of the reichsminister of foreign affairs received the vice-president of the French ministerial council Admiral Darlan."

Nazi Submarine Visits Mexico

MEXICO CITY, May 12 (AP)—Unconfirmed reports circulated in informed quarters here tonight that a large German submarine three weeks ago landed several passengers, presumably Nazi agents—in Mexico, and left after loading a cargo of munitions concentrates.

According to the unconfirmed reports, the submarine landed about April 21 somewhere in the almost deserted fifty-mile stretch between Vera Cruz and Alvarado, on the Gulf of Mexico.

The navy ministry declined comment, but a careful check of the coast is being made.

Hitler To Meet Stalin, Mussolini On War Problems

Conferences Likely To Result from Late Political Moves

VICHY, France, May 12 (AP)—Separate meetings of Adolf Hitler with Joseph Stalin and Benito Mussolini were considered in diplomatic circles here tonight as likely to result from the current political moves over Europe.

The object of the meetings, these circles said, probably would be complete economic if not military organization of the Axis-dominated continent.

Observers listed the current shakeup of Spain's civil and military organization and Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan's negotiations with the Germans as indicators of forthcoming conferences of the German fuhrer and Stalin and Mussolini.

In Berlin, an official announcement said Darlan had been received personally by Adolf Hitler, in the presence of German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop. The site of the meeting was not disclosed.

In addition they noted the trip of French Air Secretary Jean Marie Bergeter to Dakar for the announced purpose of strengthening air defenses and seeking closer aerial ties between French west Africa and the mother country.

Although Bergeter arrived in Dakar yesterday, today's official announcement was the first disclosure that such a journey had been contemplated, much less made.

Chief of State Philippe Petain returned from his Riviera vacation today to await the arrival of Darlan tomorrow from collaboration conferences with German leaders.

Also high on Petain's list of appointments was one with U. S. Ambassador Admiral William D. Leahy, who has asked an interview to discuss the general European situation, including that air food supplies.

Knox Declares All America Is Awaiting Order To Go Forward

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Secretary Knox asserted tonight that "all America is waiting for x x x is the word to go forward—we've made our choice."

America's choice, the navy secretary told the American Society of Military Engineers in an extemporaneous address was "to oppose the aggressor with enough force either to scare him off or defeat him."

Knox declared the nation had but three courses—to face an aggressor with force, to become isolated from the rest of the world, or to surrender.

LEWISTON, Pa., May 12 (AP)—The twisted and charred wreckage of a missing airplane in which socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Brewster set out from New York Friday was found tonight on Shade Mountain, twenty-five miles south of this central Pennsylvania town, and pilots of searching planes said its occupants were dead.

Corporal Preston C. Orthmeyer of the state police reported from the scene that the bodies were "burned almost beyond recognition."

Plane Badly Wrecked
G. E. Nearhood of Beaver Spring, a few miles distant from Shade Mountain, who was one of the first to fly over the wreckage, said nothing but a "bundle of steel tubing, rolled up like a ball" was visible from the air. He added:

"I don't think they ever knew what they hit."

The discovery, first reported by an All-American aviation air mail pilot, climaxed a three-day search of heavily wooded mountains that once were known as aviation's "graveyard of the Alleghenies" because of the number of planes that met disaster there.

The Brewsters were en route to Warren, O., when they disappeared.

Police Leave for Scene
A state police detail went from here to the scene by automobile.

Captain William A. Moore, superintendent of the Harrisburg, Pa., airport, said he flew over the wreckage at the height of only fifty feet. "The plane evidently flew into the top of a mountain wide open, and slid along the ground for about 100 feet."

Captain Moore said the airplane crashed in an area burnt over from recent forest fires and was "very hard to see" from the air.

"It apparently burst into flames when it struck," he declared.

If the airplane had flown 200 feet higher it would have cleared the mountain, he said.

Bodies Identified

The bodies were identified by Whitney Stone, a brother-in-law of Brewster, who accompanied searching parties to the top of Shade Mountain, twenty-five miles south of here, soon after the wreckage was sighted by an air mail pilot.

State police said the ship had struck the top of the 1,800-foot mountain, plowing up nearly 100 feet of ground, snapping off tree tops and finally bursting into flames.

Monsignor Tierney Dies at Age of 88

EMMITSBURG, Md., May 12 (AP)—Death after an illness of several months came today to the Rt. Rev. Monsignor John J. Tierney, dean emeritus of the faculty of Mt. St. Mary's College, who was recognized as one of the country's leading biblical scholars. He was 88.

Monsignor Tierney was a familiar figure around the Mt. St. Mary's campus until several months ago, although he retired as faculty dean two years ago.

Funeral services will be held in the college chapel at 10:30 a. m. Thursday, with interment in the college cemetery.

Monsignor Tierney, born in Ireland in 1853, came to Louisville, Ky., in 1867. He was graduated from Mt. St. Mary's in 1880 and was ordained in the diocese of Wilmington in 1883.

Committee Backs Bill Giving FDR Control of Ships

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—The bill empowering President Roosevelt to take over foreign ships in American ports and use them in the defense or aid-to-Britain program was approved without major changes today by the Senate Commerce committee.

Meanwhile, as officials worked on other aspects of the defense and aid plans, it became apparent that many sacrifices by American consumers were in prospect. For one thing, William L. Batt of the office for production management forecast that the nation's entire aluminum supply would be devoted to military needs by 1942.

Other defense officials said that a second twenty percent cut in automobile production was a "distinct possibility" although "still in the pure speculation stage" and that if a sharp upswing occurred in defense demands, the manufacture of furnaces, refrigerators and other household goods might also be curtailed.

Oppose Ship Transfers
Before the Senate committee okayed the House-approved ship seizure bill, 11 to 4, it defeated a move by Senators Vandenberg (R-Mich.) and Clark (D-Mo.) to prohibit the transfer of any Axis ships to Britain.

Labor Troubles Prevent Warship Construction

(By The Associated Press)
A new upsurge of labor difficulties halted work yesterday (Monday) on $500,000,000 of warship construction and other defense contracts in west coast shipyards, and on a $3,000,000 naval drydock project in Boston.

In addition:

A strike was called for 11 a. m. (EST) today in the Hudson Motor Company in Detroit, great Michigan industrial center already in the throes of a teamsters' strike and faced with the threat of a walkout in many General Motors plants on Thursday.

A walkout of 200 employees of the Smeed Sand & Gravel Corporation, building supply concern, threatened to delay emergency construction in Washington.

Rail Workers Vote Strike

Engine, train and yard service men of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Coast Railroad voted to strike, but set no date.

Only a relatively small number of workers—1,700 AFL and CIO machinists—were involved in the west coast ship construction dispute.

Their walkout, described by President William Green of the AFL as an "outlaw strike," forced the closing, however, of eleven shipyards and drydocks in the San Francisco area with between 15,000 and 20,000 employees.

Green applied the designation "outlaw" because the walkout violated, he said, a management-union agreement prohibiting either strikes or lockouts. The AFL machinists replied that they had not ratified the agreement; the CIO was not a party to it.

The machinists seek an increase from $1 to $1.15 an hour with continuance of double time for overtime. The management offered $1.12 with time and one-half for overtime.

Trouble in Boston

At Boston, the grievance of some 900 striking AFL craftsmen was the employment of WPA labor and civil service workers at the naval base. A conference was arranged for today in Washington between union representatives and navy and other government officials.

All the other disputes involved wage questions, though details were not, in all cases, disclosed.

The United Automobile Workers (CIO) asked a fifteen-cent hourly wage increase from Hudson whose present scale was not made public. The company has about 8,000 employees and some defense contracts. The UAW-CIO said those engaged on defense work would not be affected by a strike.

Germany Declares Missing Chief Is Suffering from Hallucinations

BERLIN, Tuesday, May 13 (AP)—Rudolf Hess, one of Germany's "big three," was reported missing today, presumably lost on an airplane flight while the victim of "hallucinations."

The fuhrer had ordered his deputy in party affairs not to make airplane flights for some time past, and Hess's adjutants—whose number was not specified—have been arrested for permitting this and other trips, the announcement said.

(As heard in London, a Berlin radio broadcast said Hess was believed either to have crashed or fallen from the machine.)

The 47-year-old Hess, who was designated by Hitler as the outbreak of the war as his political heir after Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, left Augsburg in Bavaria about 6 p. m. Saturday, piloting his own machine, and has not been heard from since, it was said.

Showed Mental Disorder

Hess left behind a letter showing "in its confusion traces of mental disorder which led to fears that party fellow member Hess was a victim of hallucinations," the party statement added.

The complete announcement said:

"Party fellow member Hess, who, because of his failing health, for years has been strictly forbidden by the fuhrer to be active in aviation, was able, contrary to these instructions, to acquire an airplane again recently."

"On Saturday, May 10, about 6 p. m. Party Fellow Member Hess started on a flight at Augsburg."

Luftwaffe Bombs British Bases on English Channel

Berlin Reports "Successful" Attacks on Key Positions

BERLIN, May 12 (AP)—Britain's air bases, from which increasing numbers of heavy bombers have been taking off to assault Germany's industrial centers, were pounded successfully overnight with Luftwaffe fire and explosive bombs, the German high command said today.

"On several airports bomb hits were scored between parked heavy bombers," the high command reported, while fires were started in hangars, shelters and fuel dumps.

Other Nazi sources said that, in all, twenty fields were raided in a blow by several hundred planes against Britain's mounting aerial offensive.

Announcement of the switch in German bomber tactics from British harbor facilities accompanied an unusual admission by the high command that "stronger" RAF formations had attacked the important ports of German Hamburg and Bremen over the weekend, inflicting numerous casualties and heavy destruction.

Hamburg, the country's largest port, underwent its second pounding in as many nights, but it was reported that damage was confined largely to residential districts. Six deaths were reported there. Seven of the British attackers were declared to have been shot down by night-fighters and by anti-aircraft fire.

From Friday through Sunday, the bulletin said, the British paid for their raids with the loss of thirty-six planes—nineteen of them victims of Nazi night-chasers. The Germans acknowledged the loss of eighteen planes in the same period.

Scottish Farmer Uses Pitchfork To Capture Hess

Nazi Leader Converses with Him for an Hour Before Soldiers Came

By ERNEST AGNEW

GLASGOW, Tuesday, May 13 (AP)—A Scottish ploughman told today how he armed himself with a pitchfork to challenge a Nazi parachuting to earth on his farm but that the "chutist"—Rudolf Hess—offered no resistance and was in good humor. He gossiped for an hour before the authorities took him away.

Totally unaware of the political stature of his air-borne visitor, David McLean found Hess lying in the field, his ankle broken and assisted him to his cottage. Two British soldiers who turned up on routine duty thinking they had caught an ordinary German airman chafed Hess about his bad luck in bailing out.

This was McLean's story:

McLean Tells Story

"I was in the house and everyone else was in bed and I heard a plane roaring overhead. I ran out to the back of the farm. I heard a crash and saw the plane burst into flames about 200 yards away."

"I was amazed and a bit frightened when I saw the parachute coming slowly downward. I could see a man swinging from the harness. I concluded it was a German airman bailing out and ran back to my house for help. They were all asleep. I looked around for a weapon but found nothing except a hay fork."

"Fearing I might lose the airman I hurried round by myself again back of the house and in the field I saw a man lying down with his parachute nearby."

"He smiled and I helped him to his feet. He thanked me but I could see he'd hurt his foot some way. I helped him into (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Flight of Hess to Scotland Has Washington Officials Guessing

By J. C. STARK

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—The flight of Rudolf Hess, Nazi party leader and probably Adolf Hitler's most intimate associate, into British hands in Scotland aroused intense speculation in diplomatic quarters tonight on the possibility of a split in the Nazi hierarchy.

Diplomats familiar with Nazi politics described Hess as a tremendous important figure in Germany. His power as party leader was strengthened by his close personal relations with Hitler dating back to early party history.

As Hitler's deputy for party affairs, Hess was the controller of political patronage and was considered almost fanatically devoted to the fuhrer.

Shock to German People
Whatever the circumstances, of his flight and even accepting the German version casting doubt on his sanity, informed diplomats agreed that it would prove a severe shock to the German people.

Speculation about a possible break in high Nazi ranks centered on the theory that Hess fled Germany for some reason and intentionally landed in the one country which certainly would not send him back.

Some sources even suggested that Hess might have been escaping from another Nazi "purge" such as the famous one of June 30, 1934.

Defies Fuehrer's Order To Remain on Ground and Makes His Escape Alone in Fighter Ship

LONDON, May 13 (Tuesday) (AP)—The Daily Express today quoted Rudolf Hess as saying after landing in Scotland:

"I had intended landing the plane but I could not find a suitable landing ground so I stalled the machine over the open country and jumped out."

(By The Associated Press)

Rudolf Hess, Hitler's beetle-browed henchman and the official No. 2 heir to the Nazi realm, has parachuted to the soil of Britain from a commandeered Nazi fighter plane he took aloft in direct defiance of the fuhrer's orders.

As the Nazi party leader and erstwhile Nazi war councillor, Hess thus became a prize of war beyond the wildest dreams of the British.

So fantastic was his solo flight out of the Reich that the British themselves, after thorough identification of their hostage, announced it only late Monday night, two days after he landed in Scotland.

The Turkish press meanwhile forecast closer relations between Russia and Germany, with sharp repercussions in the far east.

50 Conscientious Objectors To Go To Camp Thursday

Will Spend Year Working without Pay and Buy Own Clothes

By DONALD SANDERS
ELKHART, Md., May 12 (AP)—Fifty young men from seven eastern states form the initial contingent of conscientious objectors to enter the first of Uncle Sam's experiments in humane treatment of those who have sincere and deep-seated scruples against war.

In a hand-me-down camp in peaceful Patapasco state forest about eleven miles from downtown Baltimore, these fifty men will spend a year at work, instead of being thrown into prison as were the "C. O.'s" in World war days.

Called under the selective service act, they were exempted from actual military duty and sent to this camp, supervised by the national service board for religious objectors and operated by the American Friends Service Committee.

Unlike Military Camps
The camp, which will open Thursday, will be unlike the vast military cantonments which have sprung up around the country.

There will be no army discipline, also, there will be no pay days. For while Uncle Sam recognizes the right of the conscientious objector to decline to bear arms, he does not pay him the $21 or $30 a month received by soldiers, Uncle Sam does not, in fact, pay even for his food.

Collections a Problem
Supervision and food costs are being met by the religious denominations operating the camp—in this instance, the Friends Service Committee. Officials estimate it will require approximately $35 a month to care for one man, and they will seek to collect that amount from the local religious organization wherever possible.

That may be difficult, for there is a great variety of denominations represented in the first group to arrive at Patapasco. In addition to members of the traditional peace churches, the Friends, Methodists and Brethren, there will be Presbyterians, Methodists, Roman Catholics, Baptists, Seventh Day Adventists—in all, sixteen denominations and several campers of no religious affiliation.

Work to be done by the campers follows, in a general way, that of the Civilian Conservation Corps. The work program itself is not under the direction of the camp authorities, but at Patapasco is to be supervised by the state department of forestry, which has charge of the 1,586-acre state forest.

Must Provide Work Clothes
The state will provide tools and equipment as well as supervision. The campers themselves will provide work clothes, since they wear no uniforms.

The program outlined at Patapasco calls for erection of picnic tables and fireplaces, work on roads and trails, ditching and construction of bridges. Specialists—surveyors, draftsmen, sign painters and the like—will be given special duties.

In addition, of course, there will be the actual internal work of the camp—maintenance, kitchen duty, dish washing and so on. The Friends service committee staff includes a dietitian, but she will need considerable kitchen help.

Physically, the camp is made up of buildings erected for the CCC back in 1934. The site was abandoned by the CCC in 1938, and since then it has been tenanted intermittently by NYA groups and more or less continuously by tent cities.

When the Friends Service committee took over, it was in a state of disrepair. Timber supports of the buildings had rotted away and there were holes in walls and roofs. The staff and volunteer workers for the Friends Service committee have been at work for several months, repairing the damage and making the buildings habitable.

Director of the camp is a scholarly, gray-haired man who looks for all the world like a professor of chemistry—which is what he normally is.

Labor and Industry Planning To Attend Safety Conference

BALTIMORE, May 12 (AP)—Representatives of labor and industry from all sections of the state are expected to attend the first annual Maryland safety conference and exhibit to be held May 19 and 20 under the auspices of the state industrial accident commission.

Commission Chairman Charles E. Moylan said today that the program would be climaxed by the banquet, scheduled for the closing evening session.

Speakers at the banquet will be Gov. Herbert R. O'Connor and J. Devey Dorsett, manager of the casualty department of the Association of Casualty and Surety Executives, New York City.

Dorsett, whose topic will be "Mobilizing For Safety on the Home Front," is a native of North Carolina and a former member of the North Carolina Industrial Commission.

Named permanent chairman of the North Carolina Commission in January 1939, Dorsett resigned to become affiliated with the Association of Casualty and Surety Executives, an organization composed of approximately sixty capital stock companies.

In 1935 Dorsett served on the U. S. department of labor's Silica committee.

burg from which he has not returned to this day.

A letter left behind unfortunately showed in its confusion the traces of mental disorder which led to fears that Party Fellow Member Hess was a victim of hallucinations.

Adjutants Arrested
The Fuehrer immediately ordered the arrest of the adjutants of Party Fellow Member Hess who alone knew about the flights, and did not hinder them and did not report them in spite of the instructions known by them to have been given by the Fuehrer.

"Under those circumstances the nationalist socialist movement unfortunately must assume that the party fellow member has crashed somewhere on his flight or had (other) accident."

Tall, dark, bushy-browed and sombre—Hess was one of the most powerful figures in the Nazi regime, both publicly and behind the scenes.

Since the World war he had been an intimate of Adolf Hitler, whom he met on the battlefields of France.

Early Storm Trooper
He was one of the first members of Hitler's storm troopers, and soon was the Fuehrer's private secretary. As such he often made appearances for Hitler when the latter could not personally attend.

To him were entrusted the ruthless measures of a party house-cleaning when inner dissensions threatened before the party finally rose to power.

Again, during the blood purge of 1934, he stood by Hitler, though some of his close friends were among the purged.

He saw to it that drastic measures against the Jews were carried out.

Later, he took a prominent role in formation of the Rome-Berlin Axis, going to the border to meet Premier Mussolini and escorting him to Munich where the understanding was being reached.

When the war came, he was made a member of the secret war cabinet.

Born in Egypt
Hess was born April 26, 1894 at Alexandria, Egypt, and thus had a large interest in Germany's plans in the near east and Mediterranean.

He was the son of a German importer.

He went to school in Switzerland and Godesberg, specializing in economics, but when the World war broke out he joined the Bavarian infantry and saw heavy action, particularly at Verdun. He was wounded three times in the war, and a fourth time during Germany's bitter internal strife of post-war years.

He escaped assassination on Nov. 8, 1939 by a few minutes when a bomb exploded in a Munich's Burgerbrau cellar just after Hitler had finished addressing a meeting of Nazi stalwarts celebrating the 1923 putsch.

He was known for his temperate habits, and neither drank nor smoked.

In 1927 he married the daughter of a German army doctor, by whom he had one son, born Nov. 11, 1937.

Hess, Miller's Choice As No. 3 Nazi

(By The Associated Press)
Adolf Hitler, on Sept. 1, 1939, at the outset of his campaign against Poland, nominated Rudolf Hess as the third man of the Third Reich.

In a thirty-six-minute radio broadcast to the people of Germany, just two days before the Allies declared war, Hitler nominated Hermann Wilhelm Goering as his first choice to succeed him as a leader of the Reich, "in case anything happens to me," and he named Hess as second choice, asserting that should anything happen to Goering and Hess the Nazi Senate should meet and choose "the most worthy" from the people.

Broadcasters To Oppose Order to Chain Networks

Court Action or an Appeal to Congress Being Considered

ST. LOUIS, May 12 (AP)—A vigorous fight and possibly court action to have the recent report of the Federal Communications Commission set aside was indicated at the annual meeting of the National Association of Broadcasters.

The FCC ordered drastic changes in the relationship of individual stations and chain networks and requested the National Broadcasting Company to divest itself within ninety days of one of its two networks—Red and Blue—and of all stations except those in originating points.

Hopes To Quash Order
Niles Trammell, president of NBC, declared following a directors' meeting that everything possible would be done to have the order quashed.

He said they were considering several avenues through which relief might be sought—Congress, the administrative agencies of the government and the courts.

"It was the consensus of the board meeting," Trammell stated, "that we should do everything in our power to obtain relief from this order."

He previously termed it "the death knell of radio broadcasting in this country as we know it, if carried out."

Similar expressions came from numerous executives of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Others Praise Order
Renewed praise of the order, however, came from top officials of the Mutual Broadcasting System, which also has split with NBC and CBS on restoring the music of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

In a recent telegram to President Roosevelt, W. E. MacFarlane, MBS president, and Alfred J. McCosker, chairman of the board, lauded the decree as "sound and highly commendable for its thoroughness, fairness and long-range enlightened vision."

No. 3 Nazi Flees land, and they were still openly at a loss over what to make of it.

IF HESS SHOULD TALK?
If Hess should talk he could lay bare to the British the entire framework of their Nazi enemy — information of inestimable value.

The first clue that something had happened to Hess came from Germany Monday. The Nazi party of which Hess was leader, announced that though Hess has been forbidden by Hitler to fly, he took a plane from Augsburg, Bavaria, Saturday at 6 p. m., and presumably had met an "accident," since he had not been heard from since. The official announcement said he had left a note indicating he had "hallucinations." The implication was that he was dead.

The British broadcasting company late Monday night was in the midst of commenting on this and eulogizing Hess as "the only idealist" in the Nazi regime when it suddenly broke off to deliver this breathless announcement from No. 10 Downing street, the prime minister's residence:

Churchill's Announcement
"Rudolf Hess, the deputy Fuehrer of Germany and party leader of the National Socialist party, has landed in Scotland in the following circumstances: 'On the night of Saturday, the tenth, a Messerschmitt 110 was reported by our patrol to have crossed the coast of Scotland and to be flying in the direction of Glasgow.'

"Since the Messerschmitt 110 would not have fuel to return to Germany this report was at first disbelieved."

"Later on a Messerschmitt 110 crashed near Glasgow with its guns unloaded. Shortly afterwards a German officer who had bailed out was found with his parachute in the neighborhood suffering from a broken ankle."

Admits Identity
"He was taken to a hospital in Glasgow where he at first gave his name as Horn but later on he declared that he was Rudolf Hess."

"He brought with him various photographs of himself at different ages apparently in order to establish his identity."

"These photographs were deemed to be photographs of Hess by several people who knew him personally. Accordingly an officer of the foreign office who was closely acquainted with him before the war has been sent up by airplane to see him in the hospital."

Only that and nothing more, for the moment at least.

SCOUTS INVITE FDR TO MEETING

Gen. Edwin M. Watson, aide to the President, receives for the Chief Executive an invitation to attend the Boy Scout national council meeting in Washington. Pictured at the White House, Scout Clifton Shannon of Washington also is presenting to Watson the 1941 Scout calendar and the defense bond posters which are being distributed by the organization.

But it was clear that Hess's disappearance from Germany was no accident.

Flew 800 Miles
And assuming that the Nazi announcement correctly gave his point of departure, he could not have made so great a mistake—for it is more than 800 air miles from Augsburg to Glasgow—the absolute maximum range of a fully-fueled Messerschmitt 110 fighter plane.

Augsburg sounded like the correct spot of Hess's takeoff, because a Messerschmitt factory is located there, and it was there on May Day that Hess addressed the workers with a commendation of their war effort.

It was there, apparently, that he chose to break the oath he had so often administered to new Nazis:

"I swear to Adolf Hitler an unbreakable fealty and unquestioned obedience."

"Vow to anyone breaking this oath, for he shall be cast out from society."

For two days the British apparently had not known what a prize had flown to their side. When Germany found out, officials still insisted his fate was unknown.

Flew In Spite of Hitler

Comparison of the German and British announcements, however, brought the picture into sharp focus. The Germans said Hess's adjutants who permitted him to fly were under arrest. So it was apparent that, either with the connivance of close personal friends or by sheer personal bravado, Hitler's erstwhile handyman had seized a plane and fled direct to Britain from Germany.

Hess had been closest to Hitler. Although Reichsmarshal Goering was the officially-designated successor to Hitler in case of death, Hess, because he was personally far closer to the Fuehrer, ostensibly was next in line.

The tall, dark, saturnine Hess was Hitler's alter ego.

Almost immediately after the World war, the thrice-wounded Hess threw in his lot with Hitler and the Nazi party.

They stood together in the ill-fated beer hall Putsch at Munich in 1923. They fled together, and were captured and imprisoned together.

In Jail Together

In prison, Hitler dictated while Hess wrote and edited "Mein Kampf," the strange autobiography and exposition of grandiose schemes of the then little-regarded boss of the Nazi party.

Hess and Hitler were together through all the storm-tossed years that followed, and were together when Hitler came to power and when he carried out the "blood purge" of 1934.

At practically every public appearance by Hitler, Hess lurged in the background.

He was with Hitler eight days ago when the Fuehrer addressed the Reichstag. He looked his usual self on that occasion, unsmiling, a trifle morose, as always. If he had "hallucinations," they were well concealed.

Yet even at that moment he unquestionably was harboring in his mind the plan to leave Germany.

Hitler May Have Suspected
The fact that Hitler had forbidden him to fly might indicate that the Fuehrer had some inkling of his bosom companion's disaffection.

But today the 47-year-old Hess had made good his scheme to escape in hairbreadth fashion that was proof positive of his fertility of imagination—and of his courage since with an unarmed German plane he risked death from British guns with no means of defending himself.

The magnitude of his determination was indicated in another way, for he left behind his wife, the woman he married in 1927, and their three-year-old son. What their fate will be depends on Adolf Hitler.

Hess, the Egyptian-born German who was the stage-manager for Hitlerism, was beyond the reach of the man he once defied.

Vote on Rosier In Senate Today

Both Sides Confident of Victory as Deadline Nears

By HAMILTON FARON
WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—The Senate agreed today to vote not later than 5 p. m., tomorrow on claims of Joseph Rosier and Clarence Martin to West Virginia's Senate seat vacated by M. M. Neely to become governor.

The agreement, suggested by Senate Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) at the close of the third day of debate on the contest, was unopposed by backers of either Rosier or Martin.

Both Sides Confident
Both groups claimed sufficient votes to seat their candidate. But both agreed that the decision might be determined by a single vote on the final roll call.

At least four senators definitely have expressed desires to argue the case before a vote.

Their arguments will be added to those of most members of the elections committee who voted 9 to 8 two weeks ago for seating Rosier, Fairmont College president and former president of the National Education Association.

It was a Rosier day today in the Senate with Senators Lucas (D-Ill.) and Tamm (D-De.), both members of the Elections committee, presenting arguments on legal points in the tightly contested controversy.

Questioned Holt's Authority
Each denied that former Governor Homer A. Holt had any authority to appoint Martin as Neely's successor. Martin forces have argued that the time Neely resigned from the Senate "precisely at midnight" and took his oath as governor "or instantly after midnight." In that interval, they argued, Holt had appointive powers.

But Rosier forces have insisted there was no interval. If there was, Lucas added today, power to act as governor in "the first one-thousandth of the first second of January 15" went not to Holt, but, under West Virginia law, to Byron Randolph, president of the state senate.

Then, Beam told police, he called to Mrs. Alma Hall, a teller, to bring the cash box, and the bandit made her stuff the money into his pockets. He then tried to lock the pair in a washroom before fleeing.

Committee Backs

on the Senate floor when the measure comes up for debate, probably late this week. Senators Johnson (R-Calif.) and Burton (R-Ohio) joined Vandenberg and Clark in voting against the bill as a whole.

Those voting for it were reported by committee members to be Senators Bailey, Caraway, Overton, Bilbo, Radcliffe, Pepper, Lee, Hill, and Mead, Democrats, and Senators McNary and Harbour, Republicans.

Statement by Land
Incidentally, the committee heard from Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission that his report of last week that only eight of the ships sailing from American ports for Britain had been sunk in the first three months of this year did not include vessels which cleared from Halifax. No figures were given on these.

Legislation approved today by the House Merchant Marine committee would authorize the Maritime commission to control the departure, destinations and cargoes of all merchantmen. In return the vessels would receive priorities on the use of dock facilities for loading and repair.

The measure apparently was designed to facilitate the commission's task, assigned recently by President Roosevelt, of obtaining a vast pool of shipping for aid to Britain. The commission said it would facilitate "the movement of national defense materials and goods vital to the national defense and to the national economy during the emergency."

Flight of Hess

when numerous high party men and Hitler intimates were slain.

If a party split had occurred and Hess was fleeing, it was believed here that the Germans might logically brand him as mentally unbalanced in order to discredit anything he might say.

Reason for "Break" Unknown
The reason for the party break, if there was one, was a puzzle. Hess was said to have tried to avoid intra-party disputes, but it was thought that his close personal association with Hitler might have aroused jealousy among other party leaders.

It was also considered possible that Hess might have disagreed with Hitler or other party chiefs about the general strategy of the war or that he might have retained his early anti-Communist ideas and opposed any closer relations with Russia.

Hess was believed here, however, to have devoted most of his time and interest to domestic political affairs and it was considered more likely that a split, if any, developed over intra-party matters.

To Build New "Blackout" Plants in Southwest For Production of Four-Motored B-24 Bombers Architect's drawing of new "blackout" aircraft plant at Ft. Worth, Tex.

By HAROLD KEEN
Central Press Writer

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 12 — America is preparing a resounding answer to the Axis. One of the more stentorian overtures will ring from the Southwest, where a most amazing venture in airplane mass production is in its birth throes.

One hundred B-24 land bombers—25 tons of winged monster that can hurtle its death cargo along a non-stop trail of 3,000 miles—each month rolling out of fantastic, huge factories with no windows!

Blackout plants—the largest ever constructed in the United States—soon will rise in Tulsa, Okla., and Ft. Worth, Tex., and plans for the ingenious methods by which this country's biggest bombers are to be produced in quantities that will make even the Nazi aircraft industry take notice have just been released here.

Consolidated Aircraft corporation of San Diego is the "parent" of the new darling among heavy bombardment planes, the sensational four-motored B-24, a stream of which already is on its way to Britain and the United States army air corps from the southern California plant.

Two Assembly Plants Consolidated will operate the Ft.

Worth factory, while Douglas Aircraft Company, Inc., of Santa Monica, Cal., will staff the Tulsa establishment. From a new plant to be erected in Ypsilanti, Mich., Ford Motor company will ship parts and sub-assemblies to these final assembly points.

How to meet the problem of protection from bombing without going underground, an expensive, difficult and protected task, has been met by design of the two factories.

In all the 1,900,000 square feet of the three buildings comprising each plant, light will be unable to escape, according to C. A. Van Dusen, Consolidated vice president and co-ordinator of the factory network. Shafts of light that might even pierce chimneys in window casings will be blocked by solid walls.

An elaborate air conditioning system will maintain comfortable temperatures in the windowless plants, even during the hot southwest summers.

The main assembly building of each plant—construction designs are to be virtually alike—will be 4,000 feet long and 320 feet wide.

On the principle of intermittently timed movements, by which each plane moves from station to station at regular intervals until it emerges completely assembled, will be superimposed a feeder system stemming from the Ford plant.

Efficiency

Railroad sidings will lead directly to the points along the assembly line where parts will be unloaded and assembled into tall units, wings complete with flaps and ailerons, etc. From this feeder bay, 120 feet wide, the assemblies will be transferred to the adjoining 200-foot-wide main assembly bay, where the plane itself will be assembled.

In such manner, with 15,000 specially trained men working in each factory, 100 B-24's can be assembled monthly, Van Dusen, a conservative executive, estimated.

Hinting at the possible future uses of the new factories, mention was made in the announcement that the main assembly building, with 40 feet clear height inside, will be large enough to permit mass production of planes with 195-foot wingspreads and 100 tons weight.

Just such a craft may be well along in developments by Consolidated engineers, known to be engaged in confidential experimental work of a highly sensational nature.

How puny then will seem the B-24, whose 110-foot single wing will darken many an enemy military objective this spring and summer! The R. A. F. has an apt name for this bomber. Democracy's defenders call it the "Liberator."

Many Opportunities Exist For Non-Defense Savings

REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS A. JENKINS, of Ohio, has done the timely thing in calling upon Henry Morganthau, Jr., secretary of the treasury, for specific recommendations for the billion-dollar reduction in non-defense expenditures the latter recently declared should be made in line with the proposals to raise $3,600,000,000 in additional taxes. Jenkins acted for the majority of the Republican members of the House Ways and Means committee, who will press for the reduction.

Numerous methods of cutting non-defense expenses have lately been noted. Representative Frank Keefe, Republican, of Wisconsin, estimates that $75,000,000 could be saved in the appropriations for the C. C. C. This, he says, is because the budget calls for appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1. These are based on 259,000 junior enrollees, while examination by the Appropriations committee has disclosed, Keefe says, that "by no stretch of the imagination does the C. C. C. expect they will be able to enroll more than 200,000 juniors, and, as a matter of fact, they will be lucky to enroll 175,000." Thus the suggested saving could be effected without doing damage to the C. C. C.

The Baltimore Evening Sun has directed attention to a number of proposed federal expenditures of a non-defense nature, each of which calls for relatively small appropriations but which taken together could effect a material economy. Such items as one calling for a $50,000 fish pond in Alger county, Mich., and $20,000 for a Revolutionary war hero monument are perhaps minor, but it points to a bill to provide for the establishment of a reservoir on Bear river, Utah, for the maintenance of water levels in the Bear River Migratory Bird Refuge in the vicinity of Deweyville, Box Elder county, which it says could well be deferred despite interest in conservation measures.

Then there have been such items as $1,500,000 for placing the Office of Government Reports on a permanent basis. This agency has been roundly denounced as an unnecessary item of expense that might well be curtailed, or even wiped out, in the face of the enormous defense requirements.

Doubtless hundreds of items can be found in non-essential governmental projects and agencies that could be curtailed or eliminated. It is good to see an alert Republican minority doing what it can to root them out. It is in such important work that the need of a watchful and vigorous opposition is apparent in the existing lop-sided Congress, and that need can be supplemented by the people of the Sixth Maryland congressional district at the special election to be held May 27 by electing A. Charles Stewart to the vacancy then to be filled.

Intensified Work Plan Faces an Obstacle

In co-operation with the A. F. L. and the C. I. O., Sidney Hillman is perfecting a plan for a 160-hour production week of four daily shifts for certain key defense industries. Except for an eight-hour Sunday period to permit maintenance work on machines, the plan would meet the president's goal of a twenty-four-hour day, seven-day work week. The individual employee would work a forty-hour week.

The four-shift plan is preferred by Mr. Hillman to the three-shift plan, for in the latter the individual would spend sixty hours a week at his desk and wages would be spread over a smaller number of workers. Mr. Hillman says his program will give the industries "all the advantage of overtime and will not make anyone work more than forty hours a week."

The four-shift proposal has its appealing aspects, but what of the well-recognized skilled labor shortage now in existence? That the government is concerned with the shortage is evident in movements now afoot to lower the draft age range and in the frequent warnings to draft boards not to cripple plants by sending key men into the army.

At this juncture, the most encouraging angle of the Hillman plan is the apparent willingness of both A. F. L. and the C. I. O. to work together in co-operation with the O. P. M.

A Timely Reminder about Savage River Dam

THE SAME OLD HITTING TO THE BAND-WAGON is being done about the Savage River dam project by the Democrats in the Sixth congressional district campaign. They are again trying to make it appear that this is to be chiefly credited to the late Democratic representative in Congress and the argument is advanced that unless his program is carried on the dam project will bust all to pieces.

Just to keep the record straight and the truth in mind, it should be remembered that the Savage River dam was projected and rounded into being long before the late Democratic representative ever thought of being a candidate for a congressional seat. Public-spirited citizens, business men, industrialists and various civic organizations planned the project seven or eight years ago, and worked persistently toward its authorization and the starting of actual work upon it. The original engineering blue prints of the project bear the date of June, 1933. The late Sixth district representative first entered Congress in 1935.

Perhaps the most helpful thing ever done toward realization of this project was the appropriation of $20,000 made by the Board of Commissioners of Allegany County in the very incipency of the project for defraying the costs of an engineering survey for it. A. Charles Stewart, the Republican nominee for Sixth district representative, was then president of the county board and it was as much through his deep interest in the undertaking as anything else that made it possible. Stewart was a consistent advocate of the project through the years and exerted untiring effort toward the original bonding authorization for it.

These reminders are not made for the purpose of giving Stewart undue credit for this fine undertaking, which will mean much in the industrial development of this area and in the creation of further opportunities for labor. All of those who had a part in the undertaking are entitled to just share of praise for the long hard pull that was necessary to bring it into being. That was so difficult, indeed, that at various times during the campaign for it, the idea was given up as practically hopeless. But it is just as well to remember that the groundwork was laid, the engineering plans all completed and approved and the necessary initial appropriations of money granted long before those for whom excessive credit is now claimed came into the picture.

The Grave Question As To Delivering Aid

MARK SULLIVAN, in his dispatch on this page, discusses the gravity of the question concerned with furnishing supplies to Britain, and the expectation that President Roosevelt will finally say something definite about the situation in his "fireside chat" now scheduled for May 27.

We all remember that in the last campaign the people were assured that American youth would never be sent abroad to fight in foreign wars. Later on that was narrowed down to a promise that American soldiers would never be sent to fight on foreign soil. Some, of course, may well wonder what the difference is between sending the young men to fight and die on land or on sea. A distinction noted in Washington is mentioned in Sullivan's dispatch. It is that the air and naval forces are made up of volunteers, while the army is composed of drafted men.

But the many assurances the people have had as to non-participation in foreign wars, their oft-repeated declaration that they desire none of it and the pressing need for delivering the aid we have pledged to Britain and its allies instead of letting go into Davy Jones's locker, present the vital question of war that is embarrassing the president and exercising the anxiety of the American people. That it is a grave question none can doubt, and it should not, as heretofore stated, be answered without full realization of what it involves and in an impassionate manner.

Boiled down, the question seems to be that, in order to insure delivery of the aid for Britain, it will in all likelihood be necessary to utilize air and naval forces; while such utilization means war participation just as much as would the sending of a land army over the seas.

Bringing Central America Closer

CONGRESS has been asked by President Roosevelt to appropriate $20,000,000 to complete a 1,550-mile highway from southern Mexico to Panama. Congress will authorize this expenditure and will later add to it no doubt. The road is expected to be completed to the Canal Zone in five years.

Under the plan the highway will traverse Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama. These countries are expected to put up one-third of the cost of construction, which they may or may not do in the end. The United States will probably be called upon to meet the entire bill in some mountain stretches where construction will be extremely expensive. There are parts of Costa Rica which do not have as much as trails.

The pressure for construction of this inter-American highway, which will eventually tie up the two continents in this hemisphere, comes from Secretary Hull just at this time. He thinks it will bring the Central American countries closer to the United States, politically and economically. It surely will if motor tourists can do it.

What Kind of Women Do You Like?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

"What kind of women do you like?" I asked an acquaintance.

"I'll tell you," said he. "That's a question any man will answer eagerly. All men have ideas on that subject, if on no other."

"I like nearly all women, but some more than others. (Just as I like nearly all men, with a few exceptions.)"

"I like women who like men, but I don't like women who have no feeling of sex solidarity and traitorously dislike all other women."

"I like women who are intelligent, but I don't like those dominating and arrogant women. (But, then, I don't exactly like dominating and arrogant men.)"

"I like gentle women, but I don't like clinging-vine, hundred percent feminine women. (A little clinging goes a long way.)"

"I like witty women, but not those bright brittle women who spend most of their wit at the expense of men. (No man does.)"

"I like mothers, but I don't like mothers who can't talk of anything but their children, any more than I like women who are too selfish to have children."

"I like women with a dash of ego in their dispositions, but I don't like women who are too insistent that women are superior to men. (A man prefers to admit that, not to be told that, and he prefers his own kind of ego, anyway.)"

"I like well-dressed women but they must think of something besides clothes, who listen when they've asked a question who are glad to be alive and who are good sports."

"Also I like women who like ME."

"I agree with every word you've said," said I. "You took the words right out of my mouth."

Visit of Keynes Is Undesirable Thing, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

It is not hard to agree with William Guggenheim that the English economist John Maynard Keynes is no American bargain and that his new visit over here is to tell us how to do it is a second dose of economic emetics which is not welcome. He is the guy who is reputed to have sold President Roosevelt the idea that spending for leaf-raking was the way out of the depression. His advice has been an evil genius so far as we are concerned. His record to us is much longer than that. He was advocating in Paris, in 1919, the forgiveness by us of the Allied debt while the borrowing still continued.

One credit that must be given him was support at Versailles of the American position and, by the way, of that of Winston Churchill that the war burden on Germany must not be so heavy as to attempt to enslave that people. He was there, I recall, representing the British treasury and that position—the American position—at least, as the event has proved, was sound. But he didn't support that position. He went home in a huff and wrote a book on the economic consequence. He abandoned the negotiations when his help might have been of use to offset the foolishness of Lloyd George and Lord Curzon who had promised for political purposes to "hang the Kaiser and make Germany pay for the war."

As the debate in the House of Commons on Winston Churchill's vote of confidence clearly showed, Britain is already getting ready to hang the blame on us for any disaster to the anti-Axis powers—or I should say power, Mr. Lloyd George spending fifty percent of her national income, we are not burdening ourselves nearly so much. Both British and Canadian press are laying the ground to reproach Uncle Sam in case they get licked.

Cost Analysis Needed
One of the great and unfulfilled necessities of this time is a careful official analysis of the relative burden of the cost of government as between this and other countries. Mr. Lloyd George doesn't seem to realize that, whereas his government has one taxing authority, we have many. Some private studies, necessarily incomplete, show that the total tax burden—hidden and open taxes—in this and other countries is not unduly light here.

God save us from any more suggestions of Mr. John Maynard Keynes. God help us to run our own serious business with due regard to our own serious problem. No observer of the present Washington scene doubts that it is a positive bedlam of crack-pot theorism with no respectable executive direction whatever. Take the conflicting tax theories emanating from different departments of government alone. The right hand seems not to know what the left hand doeth. In that confusion one single guiding voice would help, but must it come from any Englishman when the natural tendency of the whole race is for us to put our own interest, our own country, our own future behind theirs in the present crisis? There is too much talk, and it is unavoidably reflected immediately in London, that we are not doing our part.

Soaking the Poor
Take the suggestions that we use our taxing power, not for revenue, but to deprive our people of automotive transportation by a twenty percent tax or flat $100 impost on the purchase of an automobile—even a used car. Confessedly that is not taxation for revenue. It is taxation to prevent the use of automobiles. Why, this country is geared to automotive transport. Our whole economy and our balance between urban and rural life was remade by making cheap automobiles available to the poor. This kind of tax won't affect the rich, who pay thousands of dollars for a car, but think what $100 added to the cost of a flivver or a used car would do to the Joad family and thousands of others in better cases.

For the sake of human justice and some regard for the American people isn't there some voice to talk American, or do we have to go to Britain to import John Maynard Keynes?

Forests and Defense

From the Cincinnati Enquirer

Because their need is immediate and more obvious, it is easy to slip into the error of interpreting the needs of defense exclusively in terms of tanks and ships and planes and to overlook the equally important defense measure of resource conservation.

The Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture reminds us that the struggle for natural resources has been the basis of most of history's wars. Our possession of such resources is one of our vital assets and of these resources the products of the forests are playing an increasingly important part.

Wood now produces motor fuel, edible sugars, synthetic wools and cottons, material for the manufacture of explosives, and literally hundreds of other products essential for modern war. This is in addition to its more widely recognized uses in war: for cantonments, pontoons, shipping containers, rosin for shrapnel filling, and plywood for training planes.

Conservation of natural resources is national defense in its best and broadest form. The restoration and wise use of our resources of wood, soil, water, and wild life, with their tremendous effect on the security and well-being of all Americans, is of vital importance at this time.

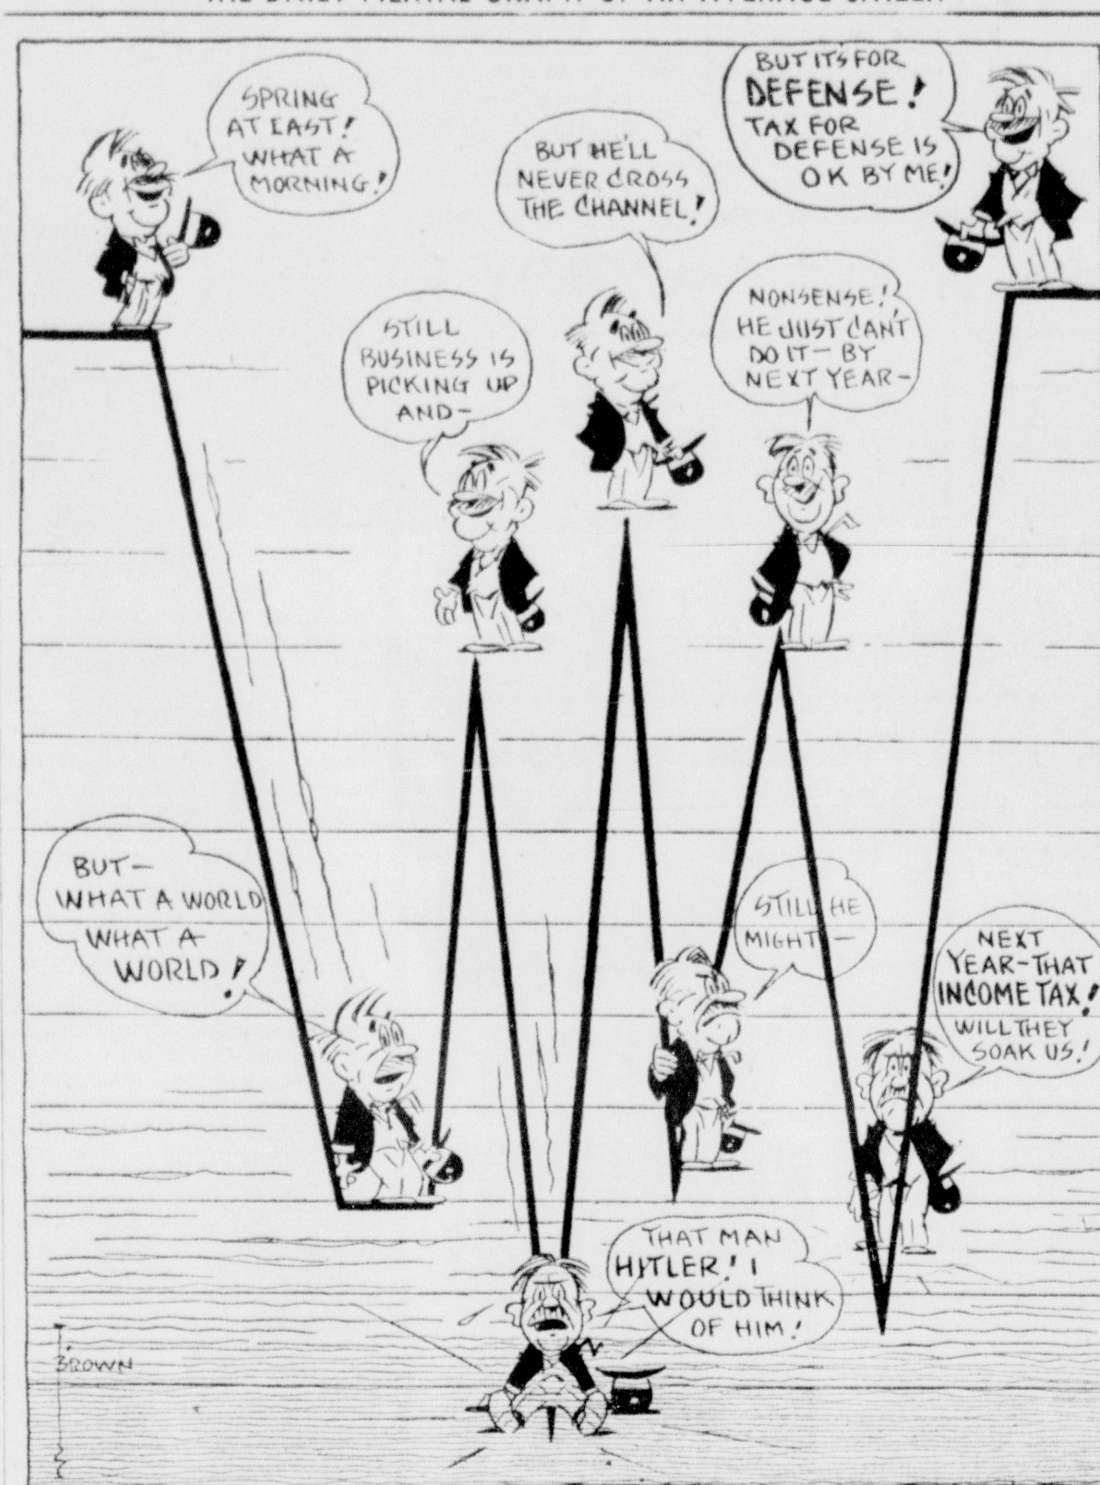

Maryland Again
From Editor and Publisher

Not without reason does Maryland glory in its history as the "Free State." Forty years ago Maryland led in protecting the right of a newspaperman—a right now assured by law in a half-dozen other states. Now Maryland has taken a step long advocated by newspapers everywhere and championed repeatedly by Editor and Publisher. The state has adopted the principle that charges of contempt must be heard by another judge than the one who made them.

That principle has long appealed to the common sense of the laymen and to many lawyers and judges. Its adoption has been resisted by many judges. Defending the general idea that a judge may try a contempt charge that he himself had brought, it is conceded by Harold W. Sullivan in his able "Contempts by Publication" that: "the powers sought to be exercised by the judge might, with a greater degree of delicacy, be exercised, still by the judiciary, but by another handmaiden, to wit, the jury or another judge."

That "concession" is now Maryland procedure. We hope for its wider acceptance.

THE DAILY MENTAL GRAPH OF AN AVERAGE CITIZEN

Roosevelt Is Expected To Clarify His War Attitude in Address on May 27

By MARK SULLIVAN

Tuesday evening, May 27, President Roosevelt is to make a "fireside chat." Advance allusions to it in newspapers, a radio tend to create a dramatic atmosphere, the public is led to expect something momentous. The creating of this anticipation may be wholly due to the press and radio, and may be quite unintentional.

On some past occasions, an atmosphere of dramatic expectancy about speeches to be made by Mr. Roosevelt has sometimes seemed to be inspired in part by intimates about him. When the preliminary atmosphere is given a touch of tenseness, the president, like any orator, especially one with any degree of artistic temperament, tends to live up to the expectation that has been created in the minds of those he addresses. For this and other reasons some of Mr. Roosevelt's speeches have tended to be over-dramatic, have contained examples of over-emphasis.

As for instance, Mr. Roosevelt's use of variations of the formula, "I am not, I never was, I never will—". Another example is the well-known promise about raising the prices of farm crops: "If we cannot do this one way, we will do it another—do it we will—".

Is Detrimental
This tendency toward strong emphasis for the sake of oratorical effect works to Mr. Roosevelt's detriment. It is responsible for an embarrassment that now besets him, America, and the world—and from which, perhaps, Mr. Roosevelt may seek a way out in his address Wednesday night.

When Mr. Roosevelt, a year or so ago, began to make statements affirming his intention to keep the United States out of the war, he used forms of phraseology which limited him in only one respect, and that he would not send an army to Europe. An example of Mr. Roosevelt's wording was:

"There is no demand for sending an American expeditionary force outside our own borders; there is no intention by any member of your government to send such a force."

That form of words left Mr. Roosevelt free to send the navy and air force, if they should at any time seem desirable. This distinction was practiced by others beside Mr. Roosevelt. There was some reason for it. An American army is a drafted army. Our navy and air force are volunteer, professional fighting forces. There is some reason for not sending our army abroad in circumstances in which we might reasonably send the navy and air force.

However, when the Democratic national convention met to renominate Mr. Roosevelt, a forceful personality on the committee on Resolutions was Senator Wheeler, of Montana. About the war, the committee wrote a plank which forbade the sending not only of our army, but of our naval or air forces.

Plank Accepted
This plank Mr. Roosevelt accepted as his own. With powerful emphasis, he incorporated the plank into his own campaign speeches, saying, September 11 last, "I stand with my party upon the platform. We will not participate in foreign wars, and we will not send our army and naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of the Americas, except in case of attack."

That was Mr. Roosevelt's position, formally taken during the presidential campaign. During recent months Mr. Roosevelt has had occasion to make speeches of a different sort, addressed not primarily to the American people but to the world. After we enacted the Lend-Lease bill, and thereby adopted a policy of help to the countries fighting the Axis, Mr. Roosevelt made speeches designed to encourage those countries. Some of these speeches have given rise to an interpretation having the nature of a promise. If the promise was not in the words of the speech, it nevertheless arose in the minds of the nations fighting the Axis. Their interpretation is that not only will we give them supplies, we will see that they get the supplies. Mr. Roosevelt has said that we would "extend" help, that we would "supply materials." On one occasion our State department said that we would "send" supplies. On March 15 Mr. Roosevelt, in a strongly emphatic speech said:

"The British people and their Grecian allies need ships. From America they will get ships. They need planes. From America they will get planes. They need tanks and guns and ammunition and supplies of all kinds. From America they will get tanks and guns and ammunition of all kinds."

Believe in Delivery
The beneficiaries of those promises think, not unnaturally, that the promises mean they will actually receive the supplies from America. Prime Minister Churchill in a recent speech indicated that the British understanding was that the supplies would be "put within our reach."

In the situation that has developed about German sinking of cargo ships, if we are to see that the countries fighting the Axis actually and surely receive the supplies we send, this can hardly be accomplished unless we use our navy and air force. We must use them either to convoy or in ways equivalent to convoying—in any event, in a way which would have been contrary to the campaign pledge.

This is Mr. Roosevelt's and America's embarrassment. If Mr. Roosevelt chooses to solve it in his coming speech, it is to be hoped he will do so in simple, matter-of-fact, un-dramatic words, incapable of misinterpretation.

Factographs
The State department has nearly 6,000 employees along with twenty legations, thirty-three legations, forty-nine consulate generals, 172 consulates, thirteen vice consulates, and twenty-four consular agencies.

The magnolia was named in honor of Pierre Magnolia, a French botanist of the Seventeenth century. The word's meaning is "high souled."

Nearly 100 million belts for men, women and children are manufactured each year in the United States, says the census bureau.

Iowa has more Danish livestock than any other state.

Corn is America's principal crop in point of acreage.

Swift changes of air pressure may subject him to dangers and ailments comparable to the "bends" suffered by sandhogs. A test pilot not only is testing a plane. He is testing a test pilot, under stress and strain to which no men have ever before been subjected in all history. And there is no second guess if he goes wrong on what his body or his plan may endure.

Science Helps
Medical science helps meet these new demands on the human machine. There are glandular and vitamin injections which help to counteract the disturbances of the blood flow and to maintain other bodily equilibria. And there are now depression chambers, such as the sand hogs use, to condition the pilot for his swift ascent to a lower air pressure.

Milo Burcham gets half an hour in one of these chambers before he takes off. He hurls an 1,100-horsepower Lockheed plane through power dives which might easily destroy him if it were not for this preparation. Test pilots—and we need more and more of them now—are an unusual race of heroes, a new race, in fact, making adaptations to a new element which in the due process of Nature require ages.

Consider 37-year-old Milo Burcham, whamming around the sky at an age when many men think handball is a bit too fast for them and maybe they'd better slow down a bit. In his early youth, he was a sandlot flyer, over on Long Island a studious, workmanlike chap, without much of a flair for showmanship or stunting, but keenly interested in flying.

Upside Down Practice
He decided to go after the upside-down flying record, then held by Tito Falconi, the Italian. He went to California and began experimenting. He saw that his success would be determined not alone by acquired skill but by the conditioning of his body to topsy-turvy living. He hung a kitchen chair upside down from the ceiling, strapped himself into it and hung there hours at a time, readjusting vision, blood-pressure and general orientation to this position. He got so he could smoke and read comfortably thus reversed. He took the upside-down record away from the Italian in a flight of four hours, five minutes and twenty-two seconds.

There will no doubt be no choice spots in history for the man who beat Falconi, but there may be should be for Burcham and scores of other brave men without whom aerial defense would be impossible as the new bombers get their opening work-outs.

And don't forget Major Stanley Urmstead, who flies the eighty-ton Douglas B-19 bomber, the largest plane in the world, on that $10,000, one-minute insurance test crowd-hop. And above all, don't forget Lincoln Beachy and Art Smith and all those early-day barnstormers who paid in their lives to aviation. They were test pilots, too.

Dive-Bombing Is Severe Work and Requires Fitness

By EDWIN C. HILL

Ever since he sprouted wings, man has been out-running the winds. Out running sound is something new, a Milo Burcham, Los Angeles test pilot, drives a plane so fast that it disappears over the horizon before spectators on the ground can hear the motor. Jeremiah correctly prophesied that "their chariots shall run like the lightning through the streets." We wonder what his simile would have been had he turned his vision skyward.

Milo Burcham, however, didn't quite literally out-distance sound waves. As we figure it, that speed would be something like 600 miles an hour. At this speed, one would be unable to hear an approaching plane, coming head-on. Mr. Burcham hit 458 miles an hour, piloting a Lockheed P-38 Interceptor over the Los Angeles Municipal Airport. That is, at any rate, a fair enough challenge of the speed of sound, and when a dive-bomber takes a long straight plunge, it actually may reach a speed of more than 600 miles an hour.

We may not hope to out-run light even if we "fly on the wings of the morning," but as to these lagging sound waves, they'll be just an also ran if we ever really get in a hurry.

Great Endurance Necessary
But there are several ifs and complicating this ever-quickening sky-derby and the demand for speed in air warfare, where the battle is to the swift. The most important of these is the simple fact that an complete abandon in hurtling, a powerful plane through the sky literally tears a man to pieces. It jar loose his viscera and it gives his blood supply a centrifugal whirl which may finish him then and there or leave him shockingly crippled and suffering.

Swift changes of air pressure may subject him to dangers and ailments comparable to the "bends" suffered by sandhogs. A test pilot not only is testing a plane. He is testing a test pilot, under stress and strain to which no men have ever before been subjected in all history. And there is no second guess if he goes wrong on what his body or his plan may endure.

THE DAILY STORY

SIMPLE AS THAT

Proving That Food for Thought Isn't Always Brain Food, or Maybe You'll See It Differently

By RAY TURNER

Everly came into the kitchenette just as Jerry was finishing his second bowl of Peppies, the breakfast food of a thousand delights. Her blue eyes were sleepy, and she was slowly brushing her corn-yellow hair.

"You'd better eat another bowl-back his chair, gave his deserted Peppies a look of hatred, and took himself to the door.

It was Billy Panucci, aged 11, errand boy for the Empire Grocery up the street. He stood leaning against the wall, looking neither cleaner nor dirtier than usual. Jerry regarded him sourly.

"Please, Mr. Gordon," said Billy, in a slightly nasal sing-song. "The Empire Grocery's having a lottery-

"I—I thought I'd have an egg for breakfast," she said guiltily.

"So!" he began, choosing his words carefully. "You thought if you could get that egg in the pan before I caught you it would be too late to do anything. Well, you can eat Peppies for breakfast just as I did. Mustn't let them get stale, you know."

Everly regretfully put the egg back in the refrigerator. She wished she had never heard of the Peppy contest. "Just as simple as that. Merely write a sentence of 25 words telling why you like Peppies. Send the sentence in with one Peppy box-top, and win $10,000." She reached for the box of Peppies with a sigh.

In the jeweler's window the ruby glowed, sullen and burning, in its nest of black velvet. Evelyn gazed at it gloatingly. Maybe—maybe it would soon be hers. Presently she turned away, attracted by a travel bureau window next to the jeweler's. Yes, she thought, Tahiti would be nice. No more office for Jerry, no more housework for her—

"We'll surely hear tonight or tomorrow," resumed Evelyn to herself when she had boarded her streetcar. "So we're going to eat tonight. I mean, really eat!" She stopped at the Empire Grocery and bought caviar and lobster, asparagus and strawberries. "Charge it," she said magnificently to Pete, the proprietor. "We're getting a check tomorrow."

"That was a meal!" sighed Jerry, later, sitting replete before the wreckage of their dinner. "Bet it must have put your budget back."

"What does it matter?" said Evelyn, lazily.

The doorbell rang sharply. They leaped to their feet, upsetting their chairs in their haste to get to the door.

"Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Gordon, sign here," said the telegraph boy, ignoring Evelyn's snatches at the yellow envelope in his hand. Jerry scrawled hastily in the place indicated, and carried the envelope back in to the apartment as if it were something too precious to touch with profane hands.

"You may have the honor," he said, Evelyn tore it open and pulled out the enclosed sheet. She read it, blinked, and read it again.

"Here," she said presently, "I can't seem to—You read it." She sat down on the couch suddenly.

Jerry calmed his shaking fingers, and smoothed the sheet.

"THE PEPPY CEREAL COMPANY . . . HONORABLE MENTION . . . SENDING YOU LARGE SIZE BOXES OF PEPPIES."

Midway in the silence, Evelyn said softly, "If only I hadn't charged those groceries—"

The telephone shrilled through the quiet room. Jerry turned toward it dully, picked up the receiver.

"Mr. Gordon?" said a voice.

"Speaking."

"This is Pete Panucci, at the Empire Grocery. Congratulations! You have won the Empire Grocery lottery, which entitles you to $50 credit."

Mr. Gordon, any time you want to use it. And since you are one of our best customers, Mr. Gordon, we are sending you an extra prize besides. A dozen boxes of Bullies!"

"What?" asked Jerry, feebly.

"Bullies," announced Pete enthusiastically. "The Breakfast Food that Builds You Up. They're—"

"Oh," said Jerry. "Oh, yes. Thanks a lot. That's swell of you. Thanks." He hung up dazedly.

Evelyn, who had been helping him listen, stood with a faraway look in her blue eyes.

"Bullies," she said abstractedly.

American Writer Visiting Fireman In London Blitz

Eddy Gilmore Helps Put Out Three Blazes Started by Bombs

By EDDIE GILMORE

LONDON, May 12 (AP)—After helping put out three fires in one night of London's blitz parade I feel like putting on the badge of a visiting fireman.

The moon was full and the night soft outside. Then the night suddenly was filled with yelling.

Looking out the front door I saw an eerie green light, made more eerie as it blended with the golden glow of the "bomber" moon. There was a big shouting up the street.

Donning helmets, Art Hudson of the Red Cross and I hot-footed it to the scene. The top of a four-story building was ablaze. We were joined by two reeling inmates of a nearby pub.

"Can't get in," they yelled, pointing to a locked door. We gave it the old football try and the door crumbled. "We're going for water."

mates," shouted our friends from the pub.

On the top floor we found a blazing incendiary bomb which had burned through the roof. The room was filled with nauseating smoke. With the pub-boys bringing water, we got the flame out.

Strolling downstairs, feeling well satisfied with ourselves, we discovered another incendiary had landed on the roof of a one-story stoop. With Hudson and a lady firefighter shoving, I got up there and kicked the blazing missile off. Then I doused it with a pail of water, and in the excitement also poured another bucket over Art.

This accomplished, we started for a big blaze on top of a garage. We couldn't get in, so again we knocked down a door, went upstairs and shinned through a window, tore down a roof barrier and joined two fire-watchers. One was a jeweler, one a bank clerk.

Women Douse Flames

Together we attacked the blaze, now ten feet high. The jeweler punted an incendiary off, and women in the street swooped on it with buckets of sand.

Just then there came a whistling and an explosive bomb hit too close, blasting out nearby windows and covering us with a shower of glass. Two splinters raked my right cheek.

This fire out, we went downstairs just as the fire department arrived and inspected things. "Who are you?" asked the leader.

"We're just visiting firemen," we answered, and then went back home and flopped into bed.

FIRST IN 115 YEARS

Peg Pauly

In its 115 years of existence the Miami Student, semi-weekly campus newspaper of Miami University, Oxford, O., never has had a woman as editor-in-chief. Now, however, the tradition will be smashed, because Peg Pauly, junior from Lebanon, O., has been named to head the paper for the coming year. The publication, founded in 1826, claims to be the oldest college newspaper in the United States.

Mules and goats are the traditional mascots of the army and navy, but bulldogs are the choice of the United States Marines, according to Sgt. Louis Di Leo, local Marine Corps recruiter.

Does of various breeds have often visited Marine Corps posts as unofficial guests, only to remain as favorites for the rest of their lives.

Official mascots have been either presented as gifts to the sea soldiers, or have been purchased.

Such mascots have "record books" in which entries are made of promotions, punishments, travels, and similar incidents. Thus far no desertions have been recorded.

In recent years one of several mascots, named Jiggs, has been the ranking mascot of the corps. The first Jiggs was purchased by the Marines in 1922 and died five years later. Two other bulldog mascots of that name have since died and the present holder of the title, Jiggs IV, is stationed at Quantico, Va.

His brother, named James Jolly Plum Duff and abbreviated by the Marines to Duffy, is the reigning mascot of the Marines' west coast base at San Diego, Calif.

Several years ago the Royal Marines of Great Britain presented the United States Marines with Private Pagett, one of the best bulldogs bred in England.

In appreciation of this gift the United States Marines donated a football trophy to the British sea soldiers and the winning of this cup is now looked upon as a principal sporting event of the Royal Marines.

Frost Has Little Effect on Fruit Trees in W. Va.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 12 (AP)—Weekend frosts brought on by sub-freezing temperatures caused unestimated damage to West Virginia garden crops but probably had little effect on fruit trees, experts reported today.

In the Northern sections of the state, the thermometer hit a low of twenty-eight degrees Saturday night and was down to thirty degrees last night, while in the Southern areas temperatures for the most part were around forty degrees.

Damage in the South was limited to exposed places and was not great. In the Northern and Eastern Panhandle and in Central West Virginia, however, early garden crops were seriously affected. Tomatoes were reported ruined and corn and potatoes suffered heavily.

Grapes also were "wilted" by the killing frosts but fruit trees were so far advanced that scant damage was expected.

Solution to Defense Housing Problem?

This prefabricated house, of radical design, has been submitted to the division of Defense Housing for inspection by government officials to alleviate the acute shortage of housing in defense areas. The interior of the steel house is twenty feet in diameter, twelve feet high, and is divided into four rooms by canvas partitions. Manufacturers say they can turn out 1,000 units a day at approximately $750 each.

Employees of Draft Board Come Under The Hatch Act

Cannot Take an Active Part in any Political Campaign

Officials of local draft boards received notice yesterday from State Selective Service headquarters that Section 9 of the Hatch act prohibits a local board clerk or other employees of the Selective Service agency from taking "an active part in political management or in political campaigns."

The attorney general of the United States has held, among other things, that "being a candidate for elective office—federal, state or local" constitutes taking an active part in political management or political campaigns.

Two other points advanced in the notice concerned any employee who works two night's a week, accumulating six hours of overtime during that week, is not legally entitled to compensatory time off at a later date for such overtime.

Persons engaged in performing voluntary services in the administration of the Selective Service law and who have signed a waiver of pay in connection with such services, may not be considered civil employees of the United States.

Such persons are not eligible to the protection of the provisions of the Federal Employees' Compensation act in the event of injury or death arising out of such services.

Nazi Bomber Fly High

Koib confessed that he had never actually seen a German bomber, explaining that they fly at such high altitude that it is impossible to see them with the naked eye—even if a person were more interested in seeing one than escaping the deadly cargo they drop.

The balloon barrage around London, together with the anti-aircraft batteries, effectively prevents dive-bombing, he declared.

Turning again to the question of morale, he said the British people were not "downcast or moaning." They're "lively," he said, even after a bad night of bombing.

Koib said he had visited Southampton and Bristol after they were savagely attacked by Nazi raiders, but found their spirit still good.

The government is well-described as a "national" one, he continued, and the people are "100 per cent behind Churchill." By his words and his example, he instills more courage in an already courageous people.

Koib left London April 29 and went to Lisbon, Portugal, where he stayed nine days, taking the Clipper for New York, Thursday and arriving in New York the following day. He spent part of Saturday at the state department in Washington and arrived here Saturday night.

Forty-six years of age, Koib entered governmental service abroad after serving in the navy during the first World war. Stationed for a time in Britain, he married an English girl and they now have four children.

His family came over here last summer when the German blitzkrieg was launched in earnest. One son is employed in New York, and the other three are students at Allegheny high.

Koib, who is assistant administrative officer at the embassy, attended the Cumberland Street elementary school, Allegheny high school and Wittenberg college, Springfield Ohio.

He will speak at the weekly luncheon-meeting today of the Rotary club at the Port Cumberland hotel.

Mrs. Elsie Denny
"I have no daughter," declared Mrs. Elsie Denny, socially prominent sportswoman, answering a New York court action by Mrs. Jane Schlam, wife of a subway motorman, to have herself legally established as Mrs. Denny's child. Mrs. Denny conceded that her first millionaire husband, the late Charles W. Lewis, was Mrs. Schlam's father, but denied she was the mother.

Believe Forest Fire Season at an End

BALTIMORE, May 12 (AP)—Officials of the state forestry department today expressed hope that the spring forest fire season had passed its peak after ravaging more woodland than had been swept in more than a decade.

State Forester F. W. Besley said the combination of last week's rain and growing foliage was expected to cut down on the number and extent of the forest blazes. A number of fires was reported over the weekend, Besley said, but they were generally smaller and less destructive than those of the past month.

Frederick Z. Hetzel, manager of the Cumberland office of the Maryland State Employment Service, and retiring president of the Junior Association of Commerce, will be the speaker this evening at 7 o'clock in the twelfth and final of a series of public information broadcasts of radio station WTBO.

Hetzel's topic will be "Employment and National Defense."

Pennsylvania Man Is Fined $126 and Costs

Dorsey L. Ringler, of Route 1, Windber, Pa., was fined $126 and costs yesterday in trial magistrates court on charges of drunken driving, failing to stop after an accident and for reckless driving. He paid the fine.

He was arrested late Saturday night by Sgt. Charles W. Magaha, state police, after his car landed in a ditch along the National highway, near the Braddock Run bridge.

Magaha said Ringler's car struck the parked machine of Robert L. Leasure, 623 Leiper street, on North Centre street and a short time later struck the car of Chester A. Goodwin, 64 Ormond street, Frostburg, near Allegheny Grove.

Ringler failed to stop after both crashes but was later found stuck in the ditch.

Fishbein Takes Issue On Draft Rejections

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 12 (AP)—Dr. Morris Fishbein, taking issue with claims that draft officials are finding a greater percentage of physical disabilities than in 1917, declared tonight that "our standards are higher and our rejections are less."

Conceding there are three times as many rejections now because of bad teeth, Dr. Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association declared disqualifications for other causes were "one-third to one-half what they were in 1917."

Fishbein spoke at a public session of the West Virginia State Medical Association.

Hess Leaves Yessers To Join British

LONDON, Tuesday, May 13 (AP)—The British were saying today that Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi who parachuted into Scotland after a flight from Germany, finally got around to saying "no" to Adolf Hitler.

Englishmen who lived in Berlin before the war recalled that the German party leader and his doll-like wife, Ilse, were held up to other Germans as the ideal Aryan couple. Because of the couple's intense loyalty to Hitler these Englishmen said a familiar bit of satire in foreign circles in Berlin used to be: "The Hesses? Oh, you mean the yessers."

Four Bookies Are Raided Here

City police swooped down on four local "bookie" joints yesterday afternoon in a well-timed raid that went off without incident.

Two of the "race bet parlors" were on North Mechanic street while two were on the city's main drag, Baltimore street.

Arrested in the raids were Harry Little, by Officer Theodore M. Rose; Leo Miller, by Detective Benjamin F. Gaffney; Raymond Goss, by Officer John H. Stitche; and James Lynn, by Officer Frank A. Shober, Jr.

The four men posted bonds of $50 for hearings in police court. Men arrested in past raids on "bookie" joints were required to post $100, police said.

The "bookies" opened up Saturday after being closed for some months according to the local sporting fraternity.

Meade Regiment To Be At 'Home' This Week-End

One Hundred and Fifteenth Will Entertain Relatives and Friends

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, MD., May 12 (AP)—The One Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry regiment, commanded by Col. D. John Markey, will be "at home" this week-end, with the entire personnel of Maryland's former "Fighting First" remaining in camp to receive guests.

A parade of the regiment Sunday afternoon will highlight the two-day program arranged by Capt. George W. Trout, regimental adjutant. The "at home" schedule will become effective shortly after noon Saturday.

Since most of the guests are not expected to arrive until Sunday, the program has been drawn up with the idea of entertaining the officers and men during their Saturday night in camp. All members of the regiment will remain in camp unless excused.

Bring Your Lunch

It had been planned to have guests and soldiers eat together in the mess halls but a recent army order changing rations from garrison to field type eliminate this part of the week-end entertainment. Col. Markey has suggested that visitors bring box lunches.

The program is intended, Capt. Trout said, to be both entertaining and instructive to visitors. Religious services, athletic contests, social activities and military training have all been included to give visitors an inside view of a part of a soldier's life at Fort Meade.

Regimental athletic contests are scheduled for Saturday afternoon, and five boxing bouts will be fought in the regimental era at 7 p. m.

Dances for officers and enlisted men will follow at 8 o'clock.

Military Band Concert

A concert by the One Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry's military band, directed by Warrant Officer W. O. Fisher, will open the Sunday program at 9 a. m. Another band concert is scheduled for 12:45 p. m. and the Company G drum and bugle corps will stage a demonstration at 9:45.

In preparation for the regimental parade each company will hold inspection before departing at 2 o'clock for the march past the reviewing stand near Division Hill. Company receptions will follow the parade.

Rookie Speaks Spanish

Tex Hughson, rookie, with the Boston Red Sox shared the spotlight as club interpreter with Moe Berg, coach, when the club visited Cuba late in March. Hughson was reared near Mexican territory and as a ranch-owner at Kyle, Tex., he has obtained a good working knowledge of Spanish from Mexican sharecroppers. Berg is the Sox linguistic expert.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

CONSIDER YOUR ENEMY
AGAINST ONE kind of enemy, a good general will adopt a certain plan of campaign. Against a different one, another sort of tactics will prove more advisable. So it is when you think of doubling the other fellow's contract. If he is the kind of cardsman who is likely to take the fullest advantage of the information conveyed by the double, you had better be wary about making it. But if he is one of those stodgy fellows who disregards such a factor, then go ahead and take a chance if you feel like it.

In a rather strong duplicate game, every table reached the spade small slam, but some of the East players had enough self-restraint to refrain from doubling. In all of those cases, the contract was set, because the declarer played the trumps unhappily. In one of those situations, the heart 5 was led to the Q and the spade A laid down. The spade J then lost to the Q and East also cashed the spade K to take out dummy's last trump. The diamond 2 then went to the J, whereupon the declarer lost two more diamond tricks because he could not get into the dummy, so he was down three.

In most cases where the double was made by East, the declarer made his contract. Instead of letting the heart lead run to the Q, he overplayed it with dummy's A, so he could lead for a spade finesse. East ducked the 2, and the 10 won. The diamond A was cashed and the diamond 3 ruffed by the spade 3. The club A furnished a discard of the diamond 4, then the heart K was ruffed by the spade Q and over-ruffed by the A. Next the diamond 7 was trumped by the spade 5 and the heart J led. East ruffed with the spade K, but South discarded his diamond 9 and had nothing left in his hand but good cards. East returned the club Q, but South ruffed, cashed three trumps and took in the diamond K for the final trick.

Questions and Answers

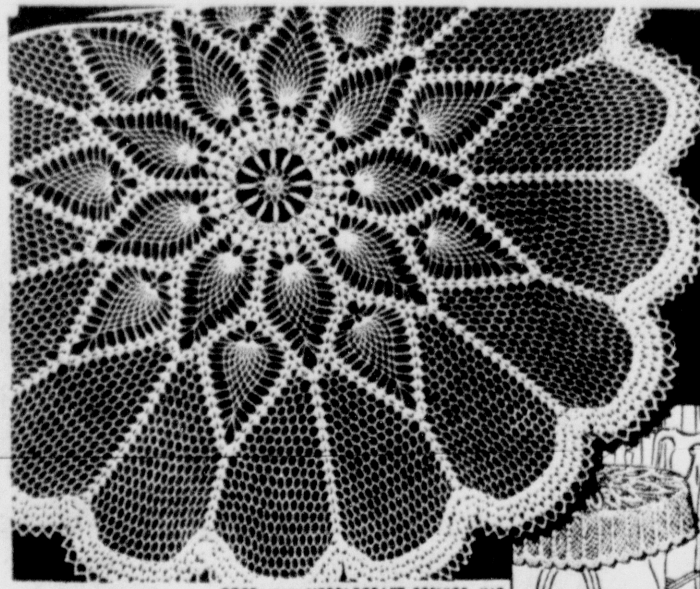

J. D. S.—Is Zwiebach or twice baked toast as high in vitamin and caloric content as fresh bread? (2) Is oleomargarine as high in vitamin and caloric content as butter and animal fat? (3) Does secondary anemia ever run into pernicious anemia?

Answer—(1) Zwiebach is higher in protein and fat and slightly lower in starch than bread. There is slightly more nourishment in toasted bread than in white bread on account of loss of water. (2) Oleomargarine is ninety-two per cent fat, while butter is eighty-four per cent. Oleomargarine contains very few vitamins. (3) Secondary anemia never runs into pernicious anemia.

Younger Victims of Diabetes in Need Of Special Care, Says Dr. Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A correspondent from Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, writes me that she would be glad to have an article which would include information of special interest and importance to the young diabetic. "I believe there may be some things the young diabetic must deal with that differ from the adult, as their bodies are growing and constantly changing. Is this correct?"

The problem of the young person with diabetes is certainly a special one, although with the introduction of insulin in recent years, the situation is much easier than it used to be.

I am happy to have at hand, in order to answer my correspondent's question, the seventh edition of Dr. Elliot P. Joslin's Diabetic Manual (Lea & Febiger, publishers, 1941). This manual was the first, so far as I know, to be published for the instruction of the diabetic, and Dr. Joslin has always been particularly sympathetic towards the young diabetic.

Severe in Young

Diabetes in the young is very severe; much more severe than in the adult, but it is the experience of all those who specialize in diabetes treatment, that the young are much more amenable to discipline the older patients who come to love their food and the pleasures of the table.

Dr. Joslin has lived long enough to have quite a long-range experience with young people with diabetes. I find in his book, on page 122, a picture of a little tot, two years and eleven months of age, who is giving herself an injection of insulin with all the attention to technique that might be expected in a trained nurse. This picture has appeared before in Dr. Joslin's manual, and in the present edition he notes that the child is alive in 1940, eight years later, and doing well.

Another picture shows a girl photographed in 1929, who is turning a handspring because she feels so well after taking insulin. In 1941, according to Dr. Joslin, she has too important a position to allow of the printing of a picture. Her diabetes has now lasted fifteen years and she is well, happy, useful and healthy.

Joslin's Guide

Many of Dr. Joslin's patients have gone through childhood under his care, have grown to adult life, married, and he has pictures of them and their children. In all instances the children are healthy, although Dr. Joslin is careful to insist that a childhood diabetic should marry a non-diabetic mate.

I have known the successive editions of this manual for a good many years and I regard it as probably the best guide for the

Slimming Button-Front Dress

Marian Martin
PATTERN 9595

A very practical style is this wonderfully slenderizing matron frock, so perfect to wear "all round the clock and the calendar." Its clean simplicity of line and perfect balance make Pattern 9595 unusually flattering; its few pattern parts and quick stitching are typical Marian Martin features. First, notice how the slimming, smooth effect of the panels is accentuated by the all-down-the-front buttoning that's so convenient for speedy dressing and flatspread ironing. Front and back seams slant in at either side, just over the hips, giving a sleek long-waisted effect you'll like. Those optional revers add a crisp, tailored touch to the whole style; a belt and lace or ric-rac edging would make nice "extras." Send for this style NOW!

Pattern 9595 may be ordered only in women's sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4½ yards 35 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coin for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address and style number.

Summertime means high time to order the Marian Martin Pattern Book! It's one of the most complete, well-balanced collections of dressmaking designs available, with real inspiration from cover to cover. Cottons for at-home and vacationing... lettuce-crisp prints... smart sports, travel and dress-up wear... cool outfits for everyone. And each style is easy to order in a simple-to-use pattern. Send now! Book is just fifteen cents. Pattern fifteen cents. Book and pattern together twenty-five cents.

Dairy Improvement Day To Be Held
At Oakland on Saturday, May 24

OAKLAND, May 11 — Activities for the dairy improvement day, which is to be observed in Oakland Saturday, May 24, are being worked out by the various committees in charge, with indications that the affair will provide much interest for farmers and dairymen and give a big boost in general to dairy. The event is being sponsored by the junior chamber of commerce.

In the interest of dairy improvement, in this section of the Garrett National and First National Banks of Oakland have purchased a registered Holstein bull, to be placed on a nearby farm and in charge of a committee of interested men.

Glenn Hoffman, plant manager of the Carnation Company here, announced that ten purebred Holstein cows, fifteen high grade Holstein cows, and several Guernseys and Jersey purebreds are being shipped to Oakland and will be distributed and sold to interested farmers. A number of these cows will be taken by boys who have joined the call clubs in the county.

These cows are to be used in the cattle judging contest which will be staged May 24, at the Community park, at the north edge of town, formerly the Helbig grove.

Samuel Seese Is Taken by DeathSomerset County Coal Operator Dies in Mineral Point, Pa.

MEYERSDALE, Pa., May 12 — Friends here have been notified of the death yesterday of Samuel H. Seese, 63, husband of the former Effie Deeter, daughter of William H. Deeter, which occurred at Mineral Point following an illness of several months.

Mr. Seese, well known coal operator in the Somerset county field, was born January 12, 1879, at New Paris, Bedford county, and was a son of the late Nicholson and Catherine (Beckley) Seese.

As a young man Mr. Seese worked in and about the coal mines of Somerset county, and after completing a course in mining at Ohio Northern university, he became foreman of one of the large mine workings in the Windber field, and later purchased the Brookdale mines which he had since operated.

Mr. Seese and Miss Effie Deeter were united in marriage 35 years ago by the late Rev. Dr. Albert E. Truxal, pastor of Amity Reformed church at Meyersdale.

Surviving are the widow and one son, William N. Seese, 1513 Luzerne street, Johnstown, also three brothers, George Seese, Cleveland, Ohio; James Seese, New Paris, and Alonzo Seese, Wilmerding.

V. F. W. Elects Officers

At their meeting Saturday the members of Post 3504, Veterans of Foreign Wars, met in their quarters in the Dia building and elected Harry L. Stevens as post commander; Robert Swearman, senior vice-commander, and Elmer Dia, quartermaster.

At the same time the members of the Women's Auxiliary elected Mr. John I. Leslie, president; Mrs. Irvin Clapper, treasurer; Mrs. Harry Burkholder, secretary, and Mrs. Elmer L. Dia, chaplain.

Brief Items

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock the Meyersdale high school Symphony Band, under the direction of Prof. Hugh L. Morrison, conductor, and Nat LaCavera, guest conductor, will present its third annual concert in the high school auditorium. A fine program of assorted numbers has been arranged. The proceeds will be used to complete the purchase of uniforms for the band.

The annual May luncheon of the Woman's Club of Meyersdale, which is the last meeting of the club year, will be served in the Reformed church dining room by the ladies of that church, on Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock. An interesting program will be rendered following the luncheon.

Authorities Say Lonaconing Woman
Took Her Own Life by HangingMrs. Joseph H. Jones Had Been in Ill Health for the Last Year

LONACONING, May 12—Despondent due to ill health, Mrs. Joseph H. Jones, 63, hanged herself in the family kitchen early this morning. She had been suffering from an incurable disease for the past year.

The body was discovered by her husband at 7 a. m. when he returned home from work at the General Textile Mills, Inc., plant here. Jones had gone to work Sunday evening at 5 o'clock and worked until this morning.

Upon entering the apartment on Union street, above the local post office, he passed through the dining room into the kitchen, where he discovered Mrs. Jones hanging from a water pipe, which passed along the ceiling of the kitchen, near the bath room door. He rushed into the street and secured the aid of a passing business man who returned with him. The two men then went to the local post office and the post carrier went to the offices of Dr. Henry M. Hodgson, who notified county authorities.

When Jones again entered the apartment the rope had broken and Mrs. Jones' body was lying on the floor. The ill woman had tied a sash cord, used as a clothes line, to the water pipes on the ceiling, by climbing a step ladder. It is thought she stood on the ladder and jumped to her death. The overturned ladder was lying on the floor nearby. About three and a half foot of cord tied in a slip knot was used.

Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy medical examiner, accompanied by deputy sheriff David Steele, investigated and set the time of death at 6 a. m. and gave a verdict of suicide by strangulation.

Mrs. Jones has been a resident of this place for the past thirty-eight years. She was born April 18, 1878, and was the former Mertyle Geary, daughter of Elizabeth and Cornelius Geary, Mt. Savage. Following her marriage in Cumberland, about thirty-eight years ago, she (Continued on Page 12, Col. 3)

HYNDMAN, Pa., May 12—Two local workmen are suffering with injuries to their hands, lately received which demanded surgical attention. Howard Divilbiss, while building a barbed-wire fence for Ira Z. Shaffer, dairyman, cut the knuckle at the base of the first finger on his right hand so severely on one of the barbs that the bone was exposed. The wire-stretcher slipped and caused the accident.

Russell Miller, while operating a gasoline-powered lawn-mower in Hyndman cemetery, amputated the middle finger of his right hand at the first joint, on the blades of the mower.

Car Is Found

The state motor police, after instituting a state-wide search for the automobile stolen one night last week from in front of George Bakers residence, and belonging to him, finally found it at Uniontown, Pa.

Brief Mention

A local couple of advanced years, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. White, were singularly honored last Saturday. At 4:30 p. m. Mr. White turned the first shovel-full of earth when ground was broken, at Akron, Ohio, for the new Good-Year Heights Methodist church. Before retiring and coming to Hyndman two or three years ago to make their permanent home, Mr. and Mrs. White were charter members of the Good-Year Heights congregation, which he had served faithfully as treasurer, and she as stewardess for several years.

W. E. Boyland, an official of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, with offices at Conneville, Pa., conducted the regular two-year examination of operating book-rules here Saturday, morning and afternoon, for all trainmen and trackmen on the Conneville subdivision who were required to appear.

More than 100 B. & O. employees from all points on the subdivision, (Continued on Page 12, Col. 4)

Fort Hill and Allegany Cop Diamond Clashes

Sentinels Trim Beall to Extend Conference Lead

Cecil Grimes Bests Henry Blair in Mound Duel, Winning 6 to 3

TRI-STATE CONFERENCE
STANDING OF SCHOOLS
	W.	L.	Pct.
Fort Hill	10	3	.769
Allegany	9	4	.692
Brooklyn	8	5	.615
St. Louis	7	6	.538
Cincinnati	6	7	.462
Pittsburgh	5	8	.385
Washington	4	9	.308
Philadelphia	3	10	.231

Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh's Fort Hill Sentinels increased their lead in the Tri-State Interscholastic Baseball Conference yesterday by handing Beall high tossers a 6-3 setback in a tussle at Frostburg.

Today, the conference spotlight will shift to the scheduled meeting of those two city rivals, Allegany and LaSalle, at Campobello and the clash between Hyndman and Paw Paw on the latter diamond. The Allegany-LaSalle contest will be the second in the annual city championship series. Fort Hill having downed the Explorers 14-6 in the opener.

Blair Whiffs Dozen

The Sentinels triumph yesterday puts them one full game ahead of Allegany while the defeat knocked Beall from a tie for second to third. Cecil Grimes of the Sentinels and White and Henry Blair Beall hooked up in a neat pitching duel with Grimes allowing six hits and Blair seven. However, the Frostburg twirler had the edge in strikeouts with twelve to Grimes' eight.

Fort Hill scored twice in the first inning on singles by Billy Dean and Paul Whitford, a base on balls and an error but Beall talked once in each the first, third and fourth to go ahead. In the fifth, the Sentinels sewed up the game with a three-run rally and added another marker for good measure in the following box.

Dean, Whitford Star

In Fort Hill's big fifth, Catcher George Sampell was hit by a pitched ball, Grimes sacrificed, Dean doubled, Raphael Ogle walked and Jack Cook singled. In the sixth, Joe Reed walked, advanced to third on Ed Lowery's double and counted on Grimes' single.

Beall's first run came when R. Middleton walked, Abuevich was safe on an error and another miscue permitted Middleton to score. In the third, Abuevich tripled and trotted home on Leatherman's one-base knock and in the fourth, Blair singled, took second on an infield out and crossed the payoff platter on Williams' triple.

Dean and Whitford each had two hits for Fort Hill while Abuevich was the only Beall batsman with more than one safety. The box score:

Blair, B.	4	1	1	0	2	0
Cook, W.	3	0	0	2	1	0

Jaycees Select John M. McAlpine For President

James B. Reinhart and Leo P. Brown Are Re-elected Officers

John M. McAlpine was elected president of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce for the ensuing year at a meeting of the board of directors last evening in the junior association office, Library Trust building.

McAlpine, a graduate of Central high school, Leaning and Gettysburg (Pa.) college is an accountant for the cafeteria at the plant of the Celanese Corporation of America. He resides at 313 Greene street and succeeds Fred Z. Hetzel as head of the progressive local organization.

Leo P. Brown, of the Times and Allegany Company, was re-elected vice-president, and Charles E. Howell, of the Howell Coal Company, who recently was elected to the board of directors, also was named a vice-president.

James T. White, employed by the Times and Allegany Company, was elected secretary; John B. Mordock, manager of Sears Roebuck and Company, treasurer, and James B. Reinhart, office manager for Michael D. Reinhart, was elected national controller. Reinhart was secretary of the association and takes the post formerly held by Capt. Randolph Millholland, now attending the Forth Leavenworth Officers Training School. Mordock recently became a member of the association's board of directors.

McAlpine plans to call a meeting of the board within the next two weeks to appoint committees for the year, among which are membership, extension, entertainment and program, community forum and traffic.

Scouts Will Hold Camporee in June

300 Expected To Participate in Program at Ezra Smith Farm

Three hundred Boy Scouts of Potomac Council are expected to attend the annual camporee, scheduled for June 15 and 16, on the Ezra Smith farm near Rawlings. It was announced yesterday by Ray C. Lator, scout executive.

The camporee is scheduled to open on Saturday at 2 p. m., and close the following day at the same hour.

A special troop award will be presented for eighty per cent participation. A standard camper's award will go to each scout in patrol scoring 750 points while blue ribbons will be presented patrol registering 900 points.

Lator said that representatives of the Frostburg Teachers College elementary school will confer with Reford Aldridge, cubbing chairman of Potomac council, today in Frostburg, relative to the sponsorship of a cub pack by the association.

Troop No. 2, sponsored by the Baltimore and Ohio Y.M.C.A., with Richard Wagner as scoutmaster, will give a demonstration this evening at a meeting of the John Humbird School parent-teacher association.

GROWING TAX BURDEN IS REFLECTED IN CELANESE EARNINGS

The growing tax burden is reflected in the first quarter earnings report of the Celanese Corporation of America, which was released in New York yesterday.

Profits for the first three months of 1941 totaled $1,587,754, equal to eighty-four cents on the common stock. For the same period in 1940 the profit equaled $1.36 per share on the basis of income taxes now in effect.

For the year ending March 31, the net profit was $5,738,055, compared to $5,456,800 in 1940. Federal income taxes in the past year were up from $1,925,276 to $3,670,418.

The report reveals that first quarter sales were less than capacity, thereby increasing inventory. Production costs increased but selling prices remained unchanged in the first quarter of 1941.

Local Republicans Discuss Ways To Aid Stewart in Campaign

Allegany Republicans held another meeting last night at special election headquarters in the Law building and gave the Stewart-for-Congress movement another boost.

It was a joint meeting of members of the Stewart-for-Congress Committee, the Allegany County Republican State Central Committee and the women's division of the Stewart-for-Congress Committee. William L. Sherman presided.

Further plans were made for various meetings, a series of radio addresses, advertising of various kinds, personal canvassing by men and women groups and the enlistment of volunteer workers with cars and drivers for service at the polling places on election day, Tuesday, May 27.

"Many citizens seem unaware that a special election is to be held May

Mrs. Annie Norris Dies at Her Home

Illness of Three Days Is Fatal to Local Resident

Mrs. Annie Belle Norris, 67, died yesterday morning at her home, 201 Fifth street, after an illness of three days. She was a charter member of Bethel Evangelical church.

Besides her husband, Henry E. Norris, she is survived by five sons, William H. of Baltimore; and Alonzo R. Oscar E., Charles B. and Thomas F. Norris, all of Cumberland; three daughters, Mrs. Gladys Miller, Springfield, O., Miss Margaret Norris, San Francisco, Calif., and Mrs. Elizabeth M. Brant, of this city.

She was a sister of Saul Zimmerman, Oldtown; Mrs. Edward Coffman, Bridgeley, W. Va., and Mrs. Minnie McMillan, this city.

British Morale High, Embassy Attache Reports

Citizens Confident of Victory, Cumberlander Says on Return

A united nation fighting for its existence and its way of life, undaunted by continual scourges from the sky and recent military reverses and determined to "see it through to eventual victory." That is Great Britain today, according to a Cumberland native just back from London.

The Cumberlander is Raymond Kolb, who has been an attache of the American embassy in London for the past fourteen years.

Interviewed at the home of his mother, Mrs. Annie M. Kolb, 402 Columbia street, Kolb indicated he was glad to be back here for a 60-day furlough, his first visit to America in fourteen years.

London has been "badly pounded" by Nazi bombers, Kolb said, and large areas have been devastated, but in such a vast city the damage doesn't show up greatly, and life goes on in a normal way, with everyone "carrying on" in traditional British fashion.

"The morale is excellent," he went on, "and the citizens generally are confident of victory and determined to lick the Germans."

Although naturally declining to comment on the position of the United States in the struggle, Kolb said that all Britain is asking of this country is sending of planes and other war supplies. With this material aid, they appear confident of winning, he added.

Although there is rationing of food, everyone is getting enough to eat, the embassy attache said, adding that the rationing system is administered equitably with no class discrimination of any kind.

Health conditions are surprisingly good, Kolb pointed out, declaring that statistics showed them to be the best in many years despite the massing of people in bomb shelters and other hazards brought about by the war. This fine showing he attributed to the precautionary measures of the ministry of health.

Well-Prepared against Invasion Britain is living up to its name as a "tight little island," according to Kolb, who said that, in his opinion, it is well-prepared to resist invasion. The coast is barricaded, gun emplacements dot the coastal regions, blockhouses command all roads and the "island is full of soldiers," he reported.

All citizens, whether actually in military service or not, are constantly on the alert for an invasion attempt, he continued.

Kolb said he has had no particularly "narrow escapes" in bombings, although several had fallen "a little too close for comfort." Like just about everybody else in London, he said he had assisted from time to time in extinguishing fires started by incendiary bombs.

Regular fire-fighting equipment, he reported, is supplemented by two-wheel hose-carts drawn by taxicabs. Thousands of these auxiliaries prove a valuable adjunct in rapid dousing of fires, he said.

Bombs have fallen all around the American embassy, Kolb went on, but so far it has escaped a direct hit. Several times bombs falling

27. J. Philip Roman, chairman of the Stewart-for-Congress Committee, stated, "It is necessary to impress upon the voters generally the time of this special election, and to remind them that it is being held to elect a representative of the Sixth Maryland district in the national House of Representatives now vacant. It is the duty of every Republican, of course, to remind the people also that the Republican nominee is A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, a dependable, forthright, man who will represent the people of the district as well as his party diligently and faithfully on the floor of the House."

Another joint meeting of the committee will be held this coming Monday evening at the same place. Meanwhile daily conferences will be held at 1:30 p. m., at the headquarters on South Liberty street.

MUSIC LESSON—Equipped with a new concert piano and an electric organ, Allegany high school probably has the best equipped high school auditorium in this section. Some people called the electric organ "artificial" when it was first installed but the few objections have now been largely overcome. Jack E. Platt, music teacher at the school, is shown giving a group of Allegany students some pointers on the organ. The students are, left to right, Harry Kompanek, Marie Thompson, Carol Robinson and Stanley Golden.

Allegany County Health Officials To Attend Meeting

Dr. T. R. Shrop and Seven Nurses Going to Baltimore for Conference

Dr. Theodore R. Shrop and seven state county and city nurses will attend the twenty-first annual conference of the Maryland State Department of Health Friday and Saturday in Baltimore.

Nurses planning to attend the meetings to be held in the Longfellow hotel, Friday, and Sears Community hall, Saturday include Miss Sadie Gladwin, supervisor, Mrs. Margaret Wilson, Miss Anna Hardy, Mrs. Mary Whitfield, Miss Janet Walker, Mrs. Isabelle Laughlin and Mrs. Margaret Hanson.

Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the Maryland State Department of Health, will preside at the Saturday morning session, starting at 9 o'clock. Dr. Huntington Williams, commissioner of health of Baltimore City, will preside Saturday afternoon, and Miss Catherine Corley, nurse instructor, Maryland State Department of Health, will have charge of the Saturday morning session which will be concluded with a luncheon.

Subjects to be discussed at the conference will include "Tetanus Immunization," "Meningitis," "Pneumonia," "Nutrition in Its Relation to National Defense," "Housing Facilities in the Defense Program," "Engineering Defense Training" and "Nutrition in Relation to School Health."

In addition to Mrs. Byron speaker will include Mrs. Charles W. Tillet, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and William Preston Lane, of Hagerstown, Democratic National Committee man for Maryland, who will preside.

Cumberland women scheduled to speak are Elizabeth R. Menefee, juvenile court judge and Mrs. E. O. Edmunds, president of the Western Maryland district of the state Democratic Women's Club.

Local Democrats Will Attend Rally in Hagerstown Tonight

A delegation of Allegany and Garrett county Democrats, including members of the Democratic state central committee of the two counties will go to Hagerstown tonight to attend a mass meeting in behalf of Mrs. Katherine E. Byron, Democratic nominee for Congress in the Sixth Maryland district.

In addition to Mrs. Byron speaker will include Mrs. Charles W. Tillet, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and William Preston Lane, of Hagerstown, Democratic National Committee man for Maryland, who will preside.

Cumberland women scheduled to speak are Elizabeth R. Menefee, juvenile court judge and Mrs. E. O. Edmunds, president of the Western Maryland district of the state Democratic Women's Club.

Local Youth Receives Air Corps Appointment

Samuel Ernest Enfield, Jr., son of Dr. S. E. Enfield, 845 Mt. Royal avenue, has accepted an appointment as second lieutenant in the air corps reserve, according to an announcement made yesterday by the War department in Washington, D. C.

Kiwanians To Conduct Open Forum Thursday On Convoys Question

The much mooted subject "Should the United States Use Its Navy To Convoys Ships Carrying Goods to England?" will be discussed by members of the Cumberland Kiwanis Club at their regular weekly dinner meeting Thursday at 12:15 p. m., in the Port Cumberland hotel.

Each speaker will be limited to three minutes in the open forum on one of the most important questions confronting this nation today.

The program is in charge of the committee on public affairs of which Wilbur V. Wilson, local attorney, is chairman.

New Electric Organ at Allegany High School Is Well Liked by Students

Music Teacher Says It Is Used Several Times Each Week

It was about three years ago that Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of schools, picked up a phone, called Station KDKA in Pittsburgh, and asked a young NBC singer "if he'd be interested in a good job."

The young singer was interested and soon was transplanted from Station KDKA to Allegany high school where he has found the job as interesting as Kopp had indicated.

The radio artist was Jack E. Platt and since his arrival in Cumberland he has been having what he terms a "fine time" not only working with the Allegany high school but taking part in and directing Cumberland musical projects.

Better than Radio Work "It's been interesting and much better than radio work which is an awful grind," Platt said yesterday. "Both Mr. Kopp and Mr. Webster, (Allegany principal) have always shown a keen interest in any suggestions and that holds not only for music affairs in the school but in the community as well."

It seems there was quite a squawk from some people when the school installed its new electric organ several months ago. A number of people called the organ "artificial" and a "cheap imitation." One man even threatened to take his son out of the orchestra if the organ was used in concert work.

Actually, the organ has proven a great success and has become an institution at the school and even in the community. It is used three or four times each week, not only for school assemblies, but also for public functions.

Organ a Good Investment Today, the objections have been overcome and everybody is convinced that the organ is a good investment. Two concerts by Bernie Armstrong, KDKA, helped to break down any prejudice. After hearing Armstrong, people realized the objections had been somewhat beside the point. However, the Platt hasn't forgotten that Kopp and Webster were for the organ from the start, thought it would be a fine thing. That's what the "musician" meant when he said both men had shown a "keen interest."

Dr. Daugherty Cops Top Prize; Local Club Joins Camera Circle

Dr. Leslie E. Daugherty's print entitled "A Lincoln," a photograph of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D. C., was adjudged the "Picture of the Year" last evening at the annual banquet of the Cumberland Miniature Camera Club at the All Ghin Shrine Country Club, Baltimore pike.

Judges for the annual contest were G. W. McElfish, Dr. A. G. T. Twigg and Robert B. Snowden.

Robert Stimler's print of Washington's cabin in Riverside park, which was taken following a snowstorm last winter, won runner-up honors while third prize went to James Weber's "Going Home," a photograph of a man and his dog walking along a road.

Three Receive Trophies Trophies were awarded to the contributors of the prints adjudged first, second and third by the Harvey Jewelry Company.

First honorable mention was given a print entered by Mrs. William Weatherholt while photographs of Robert Angier and James B. Smith, of Frostburg, were tied for second honorable mention.

Fifty-four prints entered in the

O'Connor Unable To Come Here for Airport Dedication

Governor Says Previous Engagements Prevent Him from Attending

Governor Herbert R. O'Connor will be unable to be present for ceremonies Sunday, May 25, marking the start of heavy construction work on Cumberland's new airport, it was announced yesterday by Harold W. Smith, secretary of the chamber of commerce.

In a letter to John D. Liebau, president of the chamber, the governor said that previous engagements to attend three functions in Baltimore on the day in question would prevent him from being here.

Expressing regret at his inability to accept the invitation to speak, O'Connor said that he "would be deeply interested to be present, particularly as this marks a notable step forward in regard to air transportation benefitting the large city of Cumberland; also because of the closer relationship it will effect between Maryland and its sister state of West Virginia. I would like to attend if circumstances permitted me to do so."

Chamber officials, meanwhile, awaited word from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the president, as to whether or not she will be able to accept an invitation to participate.

Plans were made yesterday to have special details of Maryland and West Virginia state police supplemented by fifty American Legionnaires and Veterans of Foreign Wars in order to handle the large volume of traffic expected.

THREE LOCAL MEN OBTAIN LICENSES TO PILOT PLANES

Three Cumberland men who have been taking the Civilian Pilot's Training Course were recently granted their private pilot's licenses.

They are John Park, George Ruhl and Paul Wilson. L. W. Choate, CAA examiner, gave the written tests while William Rannels, local instructor, took them through their flight examinations.

Private pilot's certificates were also awarded to Carl Reed, export manager of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company; Thomas Murphy, 311 Decatur street; Robert Diggs, LaVale; and Ben Franklin, this city.

Two Altoona, Pa., men, Ray A. Emigh, and Robert Danemark, came here for tests. Emigh was granted a private pilot's license while Danemark passed a 2-S rating. This allows Danemark to pilot ships of 2,000 pounds.

R. Merrill Cobble, Glenn street, this city took his written examination for a private pilot's license. Both the written and flight examinations were given at the Mexico Farms airport.

One Platform Will Serve Two Purposes at Airport

The chamber of commerce is practicing what it preaches in the way of economy.

No extra money will be expended to build a speakers' platform for the ceremonies Sunday, May 25, celebrating the start of actual construction work on the new Cumberland airport near Wiley Ford, it was announced yesterday by Chamber Secretary Harold W. Smith.

Smith said that the floor of what will be the construction headquarters will be used as the platform. Centrally located, it will serve the purpose admirably, he declared. Later, walls will be erected, and it will become the temporary administration building.

Annulment of 1922 Marriage Is Asked

Wife Already Had a Husband, Male Says; Four Seek Divorces

One annulment suit and four divorce cases were placed on the equity docket yesterday in circuit court.

The annulment suit was brought by Thomas Barkins against Mrs. Virginia Bessie Barkins, of Frostburg. The bill of complaint, filed by Morgan C. Harris, attorney, says the couple was wed here May 27, 1922, and that Mrs. Barkins deserted her husband New Year's day, 1924.

Since the separation, the suit says, Barkins has learned that before she married him, his wife had been married to Robert Slayton and that this marriage had never been annulled or dissolved by divorce. Accordingly, he asks that his marriage be declared null and void.

An absolute divorce is asked by Mrs. Virginia Lee Morgan in a suit docketed by Morris Baron, attorney, against Eugene John Morgan. The couple was wed in Frostburg September 6, 1935, according to the bill of complaint, which asks the custody of two small children and payment of alimony.

Charles E. Jones is named defendant in a divorce suit filed by Mrs. Violet R. Jones. The suit docketed by Clarence Shutter, attorney, asks an absolute divorce and custody of a minor child.

In another case filed by Shutter, Mrs. Minnie E. Jackson seeks an absolute divorce from Alfred L. Jackson. The couple was wed in Westport March 4, 1938, the bill of complaint says.

Dissolution of a marriage contracted more than a quarter-century ago is asked in a suit filed by Austin L. Duckworth against Mrs. Lydia May Duckworth. The bill of complaint, docketed by Horace D. Whitworth, Jr., attorney, says that the couple was wed May 21, 1915, and lived together until last month.

The plaintiff asks custody of two of five children, the others being of legal age.

Brother Paul Will Address Graduates Of LaSalle, June 8

Father Mountain To Deliver Sermon; Oratory Judges Named

Damage Suit Trial Takes All Day; Jury Finds Verdict in 10 Minutes

It took a circuit court jury only ten minutes yesterday afternoon to reach a verdict in a damage suit in which testimony occupied nearly the entire day.

Damages of $205 were awarded by the jury to John C. Buchanan and against David F. Kretzer, both of Hagerstown, the case having been removed from Washington county for trial here.

The trial, first of the civil docket lasted from 10 a. m., until 4:45 p. m., and the jury returned its verdict before 5 p. m.

The suit grew out of an automobile collision last November 11 in Hagerstown. Testimony showed that Buchanan was traveling on a boulevard street and that Kretzer had failed to stop at the stop-sign. Buchanan's car crashed against the front of Kretzer's automobile.

Capacity Crowd Hears Stewart At Hagerstown

GOP Nominee Says Would Ruin Free American Institutions

HAGERSTOWN, May 12 (AP)—Charles Stewart, Republican candidate for Congress, told a capacity crowd at Washington county men's Republican headquarters tonight that "no one man" was enough to decide the destiny of this country.

Stewart promised Washington county voters that, if elected, would return to the Sixth district to ask the mothers and fathers what should be done with boys.

"I do not believe we were instrumental in starting the war," Republican nominee stated. "I have not agreed with all the New Deal has stood for, I am willing to give all equipment, and anything else necessary England except manpower."

Stewart warned that if the U. S. States did get into war it "cost billions of dollars and every free institution in country."

The G. O. P. candidate for the left vacant by the death of Rep. William D. Byron, D., whose widow Stewart opposed, ended the Southern part of Washington during the day.
